Campaign Roars Toward Hectic Climax

Candidates Go 'All Out' With Closing Drives

Willkie In Jersey Today, New York Tomorrow, Plans Answer to FDR's Boston Talk; Roosevelt Opens Fast Tri-State Finish.

(By Associated Press)

Hectic and historic, the 1940 presidential campaign reached its intense, "all out" final stage today with both President Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie opening their finish drives for the votes which will tell the story on Nov. 5.

In Washington, President Roosevelt donned his "old campaigner" hat for a tri-state sweep into New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio. The timetable called for a major speech at Brooklyn tonight, another at Cleveland tomorrow night, and a last talk to the voters from Hyde Park, N. Y., on election eve.

Willkie, concentrating his finish "push" this week in two states which add up to 63 electoral votes, marked one section of New Jersey for his attention today and had a major address down for Madison Square Garden tomorrow night. From "somewhere in New Jersey" he plans to reply tonight by radio to Mr. Roosevelt's Boston speech of Wednesday charging Republicans in congress with obstructing both national program and efforts to benefit the farmer.

Willkie Repeats War Policy Attack

ABOARD THE WILLKIE TRAIN IN NEW JERSEY—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie asserted today that President Roosevelt's foreign policies "are leading us straight to a war for which we are totally unready," and added that his domestic policies "are leading to complete collapse."

The Republican presidential nominee issued a statement continuing his criticism of the chief executive's Boston address as he approached the end of an 18,000 mile campaign tour.

He announced he would discuss the speech further in a radio broadcast at 8:30 p. m. today (EST) over the NBC (red) network. Special attention will be placed on aviation angles.

Willkie's statement, made public from his special train which will be broken up tomorrow noon, took up primarily Mr. Roosevelt's disclosure at Boston Wednesday what the Republican termed certain orders which the British government had placed with our manufacturers.

"And the tragic fact," he said, "is that, owing to the policy of neglect and delay over the past seven years, they must remain on order for many, many months to come."

The Republican candidate argued that the president "by inference and innuendo" tried to take credit for the plane orders to manufacturers who, he declared, had been neglected and "even abused" by the New Deal.

Roosevelt Ready For Final Drive

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Opening up the final "big push" of his 1940 campaigning, President Roosevelt got ready today for a quick sweep through New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

The territory marked for invasion was politically rich, representing 109 electorial votes—one fifth of the entire national total. Entraining here in mid-afternoon, Mr. Roosevelt will swing through metropolitan and upstate New York, western Pennsylvania and thence to Cleveland, the biggest city in Ohio.

The first major speech of this final drive was down for tonight (9 p. m., EST) at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, a spot that has almost been a "fixture" on the Democratic nominee's program during many years of campaigning.

Tomorrow night at 9 p. m. EST) he will speak out to the nation again, from Cleveland's auditorium, scene of several national political conventions.

The campaign trail will end Monday night—at his own home in Hyde Park, N. Y., where he will broadcast his closing appeal to the nation's voters.

The Brooklyn speech will be his second bid within a week for the greater New York vote. He made one of the major addresses of his campaign at Manhattan's Madison Square Garden in Manhattan Monday night, in his drive to pile up a city majority sufficient to swing New York's 47 electoral votes to the Democratic ticket.

They Won Prizes In Mansfield's Halloween Parade

Peter Rabbit was just about to take off "his" mask last night when the cameraman happened along. Barbara Foncannon, upper left, Highland avenue, won first prize of $10 in the best comic cartoon character class, while James Garrison, upper right, won second prize of $5 for his Mickey Mouse. In the top center picture are first prize winners in the finest costumes for men and women, Lester Young, South Adams street, and Luella Bennett, Clairmont avenue. At the lower left is a glimpse of the handsome red, white and blue float which won first prize of $35 for the Junior Association of Commerce. It stressed the citizenship work of the J.A.C. with reminders to vote on Nov. 5. At the lower right are Uncle Sam and Miss Liberty — Paul Winemiller and Dixie Lee Caldwell of Crestline, who won a $10 special award for their handsome satin costumes.

Planes Attack Capital Harbor Area In Relays

Dispatches Tell of Serious Setbacks For Italian Land Troops as They Are Caught In Trap; Greek Warships Aid In Attack.

By BEN AMES, United Press Staff Correspondent.

ATHENS, Greece—Italian bombing planes roaring over this ancient capital in relays repeatedly attacked the adjacent port of Piraeus and other targets today, while Greek mountain troops were reported officially to be repulsing a major Fascist attack led by tanks on the Epirus front.

Italian bombs blasted at Tatoi, the Athens airport, at almost the same moment Fascist raiders dumped tons of high explosives on the Piraeus zone, only a few miles from the capital.

In an ancient, rattletrap taxicab, the only one willing to dash into the bombed zone, I toured the harbor while the second Italian raid was in progress. Most of the bombs seemed to land in the water of the Bay of Salamis, hurling great geysers into the air.

Greek fighter planes went up against the Italian craft and anti-aircraft guns fired at the raiders.

The Italian planes were like tiny "T-shaped" specks in a high brilliant blue sky when they first appeared over the Athens-Piraeus zone, which was the famed Attica of ancient times.

Thousands of poverty-stricken refugees, most of whom have come here from Asia Minor in recent years, were thrown into panic by the raiders. They rushed blindly from huts and ramshackle shelters along the road between Piraeus and Athens, seeking a place of safety against the bombs.

Beyond the hump of the hilly peninsula where the town of Piraeus spreads out beside an excellent harbor, the bark of anti-aircraft guns offered seemingly casual opposition to the Italian warcraft.

While bombs were falling on the harbor, I could hear the thud of other explosions to the north and see the puff of anti-aircraft shells exploding beyond the famed Acropolis as the raiders apparently dumped more bombs on the Tatoi airfield.

Unofficial reports from the front opposite the Albanian border told of increasingly severe fighting on all sectors. New Greek reinforcements, including troops called up recently, were said to be arriving steadily in the battle zone.

A communique broadcast by the official wireless said also that two Italian companies had been routed in one sector and had fled, throwing away their arms and equipment.

Budapest quoted the Greek wireless that these Italians were ambushed on the Florina front in northwestern Greece. Many of the Italians were killed by enfilading machine gun fire, it was said, and the others ran. Budapest reported also that the first 50 Italian prisoners had arrived at Salonica.)

The high command communique reported that some irregulars, evidently Albanians, were fighting beside the Italians.

Greek warships, it was asserted, bombarded the Italian rightwing yesterday. It was believed that this meant that Italian bases and concentrations opposite Corfu had been attacked.

A wireless communique had said earlier that on the front as a whole low clouds and driving rain had confined fighting to local skirmishes. On part of the front, it was said, the weather prevented airplanes from co-operating with ground forces.

WAITING: Turkish President Promises Close Watch on War

(By Associated Press)

ANKARA, Turkey—President Ismet Inonu of Turkey informed his national assembly today that Turkey would not enter the war now, but was studying the situation in the Mediterranean in collaboration with Great Britain, her ally.

The key to the decision seemed to observers to lie in the president's statement that Turkey's relations with Soviet Russia "are now taking a friendly turn" after "passing through a critical stage."

He reiterated, however, that Turkey would fight instantly if attacked and insisted: "We remain loyal to our friendships, obligations and ties of collaboration."

"Our neighbors, the Greeks, unfortunately have been called into the war and we, with our ally, Britain, are studying the situation," said Inonu. "Our country has decided to defend our independence, security and land. This is the greatest pride of our nation and no change has been made in our foreign policy. We have no external ambitions.

"We have decided to act for the interests of our nation without harming anyone else."

This was interpreted to mean that Turkey, acting probably with the counsel of Soviet Russia, had decided to await developments before going to war. These developments might be a direct attack on Turkey or entrance of Bulgaria

Stay at Home as Punishment for Halloween Prank

While the rest of Mansfield celebrated with a Halloween carnival and parties last night, 16 Senior high school youths, some of them football players, were forced to stay at home under threat of being taken into custody by police if they appeared on the streets.

It was their punishment for damaging property at the home of C. A. Hines, 41 Glenwood boulevard, and other acts of vandalism Tuesday night.

Judge C. J. Anderson imposed the penalty in juvenile court yesterday. He also told the youths to apologize to Hines for spreading tar, cement, and rubbish on his porch and to offer to clean the porch and pay for the damage.

They apologized, but Hines said he would hire men to clean up the porch and repair damage. He said parents of some of the youths had offered to pay the cost.

The youths will be brought into juvenile court again next Tuesday morning but the cases will be dismissed if damages have been paid, Judge Anderson said.

The boys, 16 and 17 years old, were rounded up by police Tuesday night and Wednesday. Some of them were taken from classes at school to appear in court. Thirteen are members of the Mansfield high school football squad.

'BOMB' CITY

Airplanes To Drop Leaflets Urging Passage of Levy.

Mansfield will be "bombed" with leaflets Saturday afternoon urging voters to go to the polls next Tuesday and vote for the one-mill levy.

Four, and possibly five planes, piloted by members of the Mansfield chapter of the National Aeronautical association will fly over the city in formation, dropping 2,000 of the printed dodgers.

The stunt is part of the Citizens' Levy committee's campaign to publicize the levy from which funds would go toward improving the fire, police, parks and recreation departments and the municipal airport.

MAN SLAIN

Find Body of Corona Resident In Vacant Bronx Lot.

NEW YORK —(INS)— The body of a slain man was found by a passerby today in a vacant Bronx lot. He had been shot in the head and there also was a stab wound in the throat.

The draft registration card in the name of Vincent Dello, 24, of Corona, was found in his pocket. Police believe he was killed elsewhere and his body taken to the spot where it was found.

Lists of Order Numbers In Mails; Boards Here Expect To Get Them Tomorrow.

Plans were speeded today for inducting the Richland county quota of the first 30,000 men to be called for military training on Nov. 18.

Master lists of the order numbers determined in the drawing in Washington last Tuesday were mailed today to the local draft boards throughout the nation, and the Richland county boards expected to have theirs by Saturday.

The boards will go to work immediately sending questionnaires to men at the top of the list so they can be classified for the first conscription of trainees.

Reports from Washington today carried good news for the men near the top of the 21-36 age

Masked Marchers Parade While Thousands Look On

Halloween Night Brings Out Huge Throng to Witness Festivities as Masqueraders Take Over Town.

Uncle Sam and Miss Liberty rubbed elbows with Peter Rabbit and Mickey Mouse last night in the Halloween parade, while the strains of "The Star Spangled Banner" coming from the patriotic float of the Junior Association of Commerce, kept several thousand people in the square at attention. At least 10,000 watched the parade.

Streets were lined with spectators as the parade, sponsored by the American Legion, went through the business section. Several hundred masked persons marched, representing famous characters while others were just "made up" for a night of fun.

There were ghosts and skeletons, clowns, hillbillies, and small animals from the Rudyard Kipling stories, court ladies and Cossacks, and of course, the usual assemblage of men and women with figures distorted with pillows.

Boy Scouts lined the streets with red flares and thousands of

'TISN'T TRUE

Chamberlain Himself Denies He's on Way To U. S.

LONDON—(INS)— Reports that former Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain had left England for the United States were denied here today—by none other than Chamberlain himself.

"Reports that I have left for the United States are so ridiculous that they are scarcely worth denial," he declared. "I am in England and haven't the slightest intention of leaving."

Chamberlain's statement was issued through the medium of a former colleague and friend, who said Chamberlain is now resting and continuing to convalesce from his recent illness "somewhere in the country."

PUT UP METERS IN TWO WEEKS

Workmen to Begin Installation of Standards For Parking Devices Monday.

Installation of parking meter standards, preliminary to placing the machines on downtown streets, will be started Monday morning by James Swisher, contractor of near Bellville.

In a letter from the Michaels Art Bronze company of Covington, Ky., today, Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton was told that the standards would be installed after which a representative of the firm would come to Mansfield and install the meters.

Company officials wrote that the meters would be shipped next week and that the machines would be installed and ready for operation in two weeks.

Swisher was awarded the post installation contract several days ago. The job, done under the supervision of the city engineer, will be completed in about a week.

The project includes the installation of 350 meters leased from the company for a nine months trial period at the contract price of $17,325, with option of purchase at the end of nine months. The city will pay $3.75 per meter per month, the amount to apply on the purchase price should council authorize the purchase.

Legislation for the meters unanimously approved by council two months ago, was sponsored by Arthur L. Croak, chairman of council's traffic committee.

New Plane Program Near for U. S., Roosevelt Indicates

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt said today there may be a new production program for American military planes as soon as congress gets back.

He told a press conference that such a program was probable and, replying to a question, said it was based on the objective of pushing United States plane production capacity to 50,000.

The question was whether the possible new program was based on Britain continuing its fight through the winter.

Mr. Roosevelt previously had said that an annual production of 50,000 planes was the goal.

A proposed British order for 12,000 additional planes recently was passed on to the defense commission by the president with an expression of hope for favorable action.

The chief executive was asked to say whether published stories were true that the Sperry Manufacturing company was making the United States secret bomb sight for Britain and soon would start shipments across the Atlantic.

Mr. Roosevelt replied that he had not the faintest idea whether the story was correct.

If it's like other stories, he added, it isn't.

RELEASE: Army Bombsight Given Great Britain, Report

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Great Britain will receive the army's crack bombsight and every other military airplane coming off American assembly lines, defense leaders reported today as the United States marshalled additional resources for the English war machine.

Less than 24 hours after President Roosevelt promised 12,000 additional airplanes for the RAF, high officials disclosed that the army is releasing its bombsight to the British government.

At the same time, members of the British purchasing commission said orders have been placed for "a great many" American merchant ships and that a large additional number will be acquired over the next year.

Release of the army's bombsight has been expected for some time. This device, while better than any bombsight developed abroad, is still inferior to that now being used by the American navy. The sight is manufactured by the Sperry Gyroscope company.

The navy's bombsight will not be released to England but all army craft will be equipped with the device.

The army bombsight is said to perform with amazing accuracy, from altitudes up to 25,000 feet. Competent military quarters predicted that the Royal Air Force will exact a much heavier toll of destruction in raids on Germany once its planes are equipped with the American sight. To prevent the bombsight from falling into German hands the army has perfected a system whereby any pilot can quickly and completely destroy the mechanism.

PLAN SUCCESS

Educator Debunks Marriage As Ladder To Security.

BOSTON—(INS)—The gateway to success must be planned, Professor Alfred J. Cardall, jr., of the Boston university College of Business Administration's vocational department, declared as he debunked the old advice "Marry the boss's daughter if you want to get ahead."

Stating that the modern petticoat is a bit too scanty to hide behind and there are not enough bosses' daughters to go around, Professor Cardall described success as a personal matter.

"An employer may consider a man a success in his job if he shows speed, quality of work, requires a minimum of supervision and gets along well with his supervisors and fellow-workers," he added. "But the thing that really counts is how the individual feels about it. Does he find satisfaction and improvement in his daily relationship with his fellow-workers?"

To The Voters of Richland County

Dear Voters:

In the years, 1935 to 1939, both inclusive, the total cost of operating the prosecutor's office in Richland County amounted to $51,850 60.

In those same years the cost in Tuscarawas County was $35,487.79 or $16,362.81 less, and in Muskingum County the cost was $41,827.36, or $10,023.24 less. Yet both these counties have larger populations than does our own.

From January 1, 1935 to October 29, 1940, the prosecuting attorney's office in Richland County has spent $11,375.00 for special assistants

During this entire period my opponent was serving you in the capacity of assistant prosecutor, and the employment of special assistants can only indicate inability or unwillingness on his part to do the work required.

As a taxpayer of this county, I can see no rhyme or reason why it should cost an average of $3,000.00 more per year for prosecuting attorney services in Richland County than in Tuscarawas county. Neither can I see the necessity for spending an average of $2,000 00 annually for special assistants

The employment of these assistants amounts to the same thing as assessing the taxpayers a double charge for a single service. I propose to stop such unfair and wasteful practices and to operate the office at the lowest possible cost consistent with good government.

In addition to this pledge of economy, I want you all to know that it is my firm resolve to serve the people of this county in a conscientious, competent, fair and courteous manner at all times. I am confident that is the type of service you are entitled to and I know it is the type of service you want

It was impossible for me to meet and greet each one of you personally during this campaign. Therefore I am taking this opportunity of thanking you all for your kind support.

'PILGRIM'S WAY' NEW ON LIBRARY NON-FICTION

Volume By Lord Tweedsmuir Added To John Baxter Black Collection.

Another outstanding new book of non-fiction has been added to the John Baxter Black collection at the Mansfield Library this week.

It is entitled, "Pilgrim's Way; An Essay in Recollection" and was written by John Buchan (Lord Tweedsmuir)

It is not the usual type of autobiography, however, because the author is not so concerned with daily occurrences as he is in giving his impressions of relatively outstanding events in his remarkable many-sided career as a writer, explorer, angler, member of Parliament and governor general of Canada.

New on the fiction shelves is "Tassels On Her Boots," a fictionized account of New York politics in the 1870's, written by Arthur Train. Tweed, Jim Fisk, Ward McAllister and many other historical figures are introduced and play their parts in the story of the downfall of the Tweed ring, while a fictional hero and heroine supply the love story

PREACHER ON HORSEBACK by Cecile Matschat, author of Seven Grass Huts, is the story of a man with strong human sympathies and divided purposes, a man whose convictions were forged in the fires of experience and who was reluctantly converted to the faith he professed The Mohawk Valley of the 1860's and Michigan provide the setting for this novel of power and beauty

WHO WALK ALONE by Perry Burgess is the story of Ned Langford, an ordinary young man in a midwestern town who learned that something had hapened to him, so terrible, that it sent him into a lifelong exile on a distant tropical island.

Other fiction: CITY ON THE HILL by Sims; BABES IN A DARKLING WOOD, H. G. Wells, MOON TIDE, Robertson

New non-fiction: TRAGEDY IN FRANCE by Andre Maurois is an eyewitness account of a disaster that astounded and shocked the civilized world. Entirely written from first-hand observation and from what Maurois heard at various times from Reynaud, Bonnet, Chamberlain, Churchill, Gamelin, Gort and other leading figures Andre Maurois was an Official French observer at British G H Q

A book which might well be read in connection with the one just mentioned is I SAW FRANCE FALL by Rene de Chambrun who was an officer at the front from September, 1939, to the evacuation of Dunkerque. It is a colorful narrative of his own personal experiences, beginning with the "phony" war underground in the Maginot line through the blitzkrieg in Belgium and Flanders.

ONE FOOT IN HEAVEN by Harizell Spence is the biography of a Parson who made Christian living fun. He always signed himself "William H Spence" because as a practical man, with one foot firmly planted on God's green earth he recognized that a middle initial confers dignity here below But as a Man of God with one foot in Heaven he scrupulously avoided putting a dot after the "H" since it really didn't stand for anything. A rollicking book that is great fun to read

RECORD ARMY LIFE IN FILM

Collection of Historical Pictures Are Catalogued By Library.

JUNCTION CITY, Kan. —(U.P.)— A collection of historical pictures of American soldiers numbering several thousand and covering a period from the '80s to the second decade of this century is being catalogued here at the request of the Library of Congress.

J. S. Pennell, one of the owners, said the collection, mostly pictures of cavalrymen, is one of the most complete of its kind and the most perfect photographic record of Fort Riley and the Cavalry school here.

He said the pictures gave a pictorial record of Camp Funston, the World War cantonment where the 89th Division was trained under Gen. Leonard Wood before embarking for France.

The pictures covered the daily life of a normal army base, Pennell said. Famous generals, who have commanded the base and directed the activities of the school, have been photographed. Routine training of the corps has been pictured and several negatives show activities of the veterinary surgeons' department of the cavalry school.

The photographs were made by the late J. J. Pennell, pioneer Kansas photographer. His widow is one of the present owners of the collection.

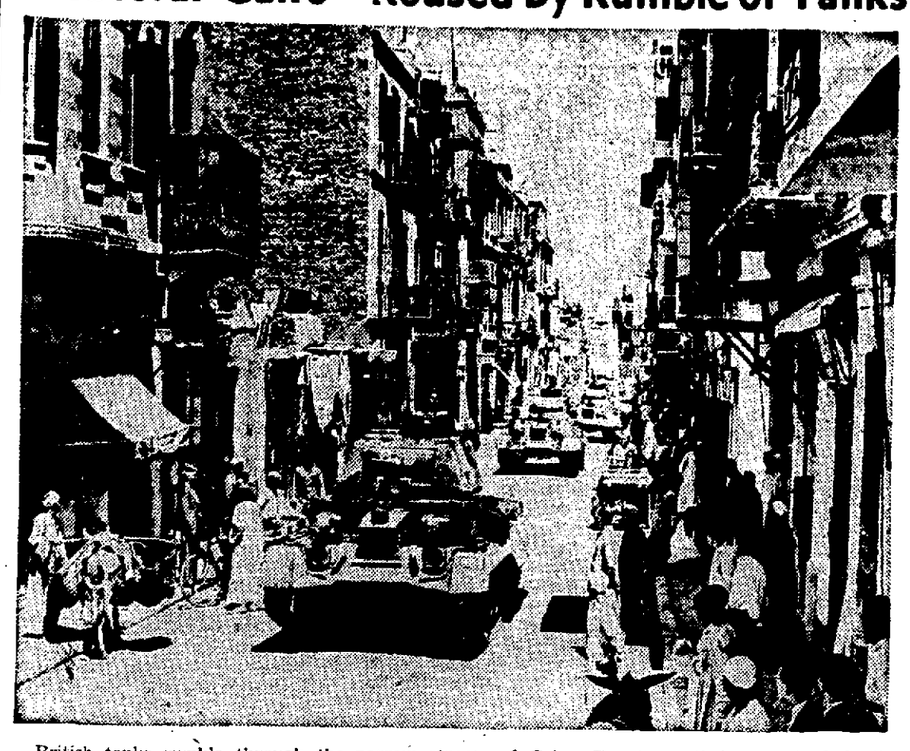
Peaceful Cairo---Roused By Rumble of Tanks



British tanks rumble through the narrow streets of Cairo, Egypt, on their way to halt the Italian advance from Libya. Egypt still is at peace technically, although fighting has been going on for some time. Observers intimated that the Italians' war with Greece may hurt their moves in Africa.

SEE AUTOMATIC LIGHT SWITCH

Scientist Says World Just Beginning to Touch Electricity.

SACRAMENTO, Cal. —(INS)— A light switch that turns on automatically when a person enters a room and shoots "light" is the prediction of Dr. Frederick P. Woellner of the University of California at Los Angeles.

Dr. Woellner recently maintained that the world is just beginning to approach the "age of electricity."

"The big problem of the moment is to manufacture electric machines so cheap that every home can afford them," Dr. Woellner said.

"We have plenty of electricity: we are using much less than we have. The future will see a greater use of electric machines than has ever been realized in the past.

"We are just beginning to use electricity intelligently and the world is at the threshold of a great age of electricity."

Other gadgets Dr. Woellner predicted would be in common use within a few years were a thermostatic device for heating a house in winter and cooling it in summer, and an electrc dust-collector which will suck all dust through the ceiling of a room.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

CRESTLINE — In celebration of the seventh birthday anniversary of her daughter, Betty, which is an event of today, Mrs. Grover Ashbrook entertained a group of her little friends at her home Wednesday afternoon.

Games and contests amused the group and prizes were awarded to Marilyn Lambert and Margaret Garverick.

A lighted birthday cake and a color scheme of pink and white were used in the table decorations when Mrs. Ashbrook served lunch. Betty received a number of gifts.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.— When Pete Edwards of Hillsdale, Okla., won first place in a sheep shearing contest at the state fair here, he sheared three sheep in nine minutes. Experts said that an average shearer requires about six minutes to clip the wool from one sheep.

THEATERS

Cagney and Sheridan.

Ann Sheridan, latest Warner star to bring the wrath of the studio down on her head with her off-screen romances, is co-starred once again with James Cagney, this time in "City of Conquest." Children of New York's East Side, she becomes a dancer and he wins fame and fortune with his chunky fists. Supporting the stars in this Madison offering tomorrow are Frank McHugh, Donald Crisp and Frank Craven. "Quarterback," with Wayne Morris, Virginia Dale and Lillian Cornell, is a comedy of college football.

Virginia Feuds.

"Sporting Blood," the story of Virginia horse racing and a revived feud betwen two old families, heads the Ritz bill today and tomorrow. Robert Young plays a southerner with Maureen O'Sullivan and Lynne Carver as his two bitter, but attractive enemies. On the same bill is a Ken Maynard thriller, "Flaming Lead," which provides the usual week-end Western.

Western At Park.

"Girls Under 21".

This drama revolving around today's problems is offered at the Majestic with Paul Kelly as a school teacher in a tenement district who is in love with Rochelle Hudson. The girl is married to a gangster and leaves him after his arrest. Their attempt to find happiness makes up the action. Charles Starrett in "West of Abilene" is the Western feature.

Perfect Set-Up.

Melvyn Douglas and Myrna Loy bring their talents and charm to the M-G-M production "Third Finger, Left Hand," which the Ohio offers for four days starting tomorrow. It's the kind of a story you would expect for these two high comedians of romance. There's the necessity for a husband for the editor of a woman's magazine and handsome Melvin Douglas happens along about the same time. It's a perfect set-up for smart dialogue and sophisticated comedy.

DRAWS $100 FINE

GALION — Mitchell Combs of Louisville, Ky., was fined $100 and costs in Mayor W. M. King's court here Thursday on a charge of being intoxicated while driving. He was picked up here by local police when he was driving a distillery truck. The truck was empty when he came through Galion.

We Need A Change!

MONOPOLY IS A DANGEROUS THING.

MONOPOLY IN POLITICS IS EXTREMELY DANGEROUS.

It breeds organized patronage and extravagance, that increases the Taxpayers' burden.

No political group can long be desirable or trustworthy.

When, therefore, a political party has been in power a certain length of time, it is to the public interest that a change be made.

Here are some concrete examples of the group that has been in power in the Court House; and why a change should be made:

MONOPOLY

Candidate	Years on the Public Payroll	Public Offices Held	Approximate Salary Received to Date:
Marriott	7 Terms—16 Years	Mayor—Law Director (Shelby)
		Prosecutor	$31,900.00
		Salary entitled to if elected and serves his 8th term	$20,000.00
		GRAND TOTAL	$51,900.00
Sword	5 Terms — 21 Years	County Engineer and Deputy Engineer	$49,700.00
		Salary entitled to if elected and serves his 6th term	$15,300.00
		GRAND TOTAL	$65,000.00

EXTRAVAGANCE

Prosecuting Attorney's Costs In Four Ohio Counties:

County	Population	1935	1936	1937	1938	1939
Licking	59,962	$ 7,776.02	$8,767.81	$ 8,710.15	$ 8,160.04	$ 7,655.55
Muskingum	67,398	7,818.21	7,975.07	8,509.76	9,339.03	8,185.29
Tuscarawas	68,193	5,934.92	7,082.72	7,188.76	7,247.65	8,033.74
RICHLAND	65,902	10,291.60	8,360.70	11,748.54	11,308.55	10,141.21

Never in the history of Richland County has it cost the taxpayers so much to operate the office of Prosecuting Attorney.

Your present County Commissioners—who are seeking re-election—approved these EXTRAVAGANT EXPENDITURES for the Prosecutor. WHY did these same Commissioners have to be threatened with a TAXPAYER'S SUIT IN ORDER TO SAVE MONEY for Richland County?

And yet they brag about COLLECTING DELINQUENT TAXES THROUGH HOME AND PROPERTY FORECLOSURES.

ARE THESE THE KIND OF OFFICIALS YOU WANT IN PUBLIC OFFICE?

There is only one sure way to put Richland County back in the path of pride and progress. THE PEOPLE MUST CLEAN HOUSE!

For Economy Reasons WE NEED A CHANGE—THE TAXPAYERS NEED A CHANGE.

Two Aboard Torpedoed Boat Rescued After 70 Days

TELLS HOW 5 OTHERS DIED ON LONG TRIP

Seaman Says They Lived On Seaweed, Fish; Had No Water For 8 Days.

(By United Press)

NASSAU, THE BAHAMAS — Two sailors, their bodies sun blackened, suffering from exposure and starvation, were in a Nassau hospital today after navigating 2,500 miles in 70 days in a 16-foot lifeboat.

Widdicombe, the stronger of the two, said that when their ship, the steamer Anglosaxon, was sunk by a German raider 500 miles southwest of the Azores last Aug. 21, seven men put off in the lifeboat.

Two had been wounded when the German vessel machinegunned the fleeing lifeboats, he said. They died. During the succeeding days, he and the five other men used up the emergency rations of food and water stowed in the boat. After that, two of the other men could not stand the hunger and thirst and jumped overboard. The fifth man was overcome by the intense heat, went berserk and cut his throat, Widdicombe said.

With only himself and Tapscott left, the sailor said they caught what rainwater they could. They lived on seaweed and were lucky enough to catch one flying fish and a gar fish after sailing for 55 days. When they landed on Eleuther island, southeast of here, they had had no water for eight days.

A farmer on Eleuthera island found them crawling along the beach toward the side of the trees. Authorities were notified and they were flown here for treatment.

Widdicombe said his normal weight was 180 pounds. He now weighs only 100 pounds.

Workers In Y. M. Membership Drive To File Reports

Workers and leaders of the Annual Y. M. C. A. membership campaign will meet for a dinner meeting at the Y. M. C. A. at 5:45 p. m. today to hear reports on the progress of the campaign.

Captains of each of the 12 drive teams will report on the number of memberships obtained. William Mabee and Dean Eckert, division leaders, will also report on the progress made by their divisions.

Following the reports a discussion on organizing the closing days of the campaign will be held, with Irl Fisher general chairman, presiding.

R. B. Chapman, executive secretary, said today that men taking out memberships during the campaign will have the balance of their fee refunded if drafted. Drafted men may keep their Y. M. C. A. cards, however, Chapman said.

DOUGLAS SHOWS HIS DIPLOMACY

Refuses To Pick Most Beautiful Model At Columbus.

COLUMBUS — (U.P.) — Melvyn Douglas has something more than Hollywood glamour to commend him as a political campaigner.

Appearing in Columbus last night to address a rally for President Roosevelt, the handsome movie actor refused to participate in plans that called for him to pick a "most beautifully dressed woman" from a group of style models.

"They're all beautiful," he exclaimed in the best tradition of political diplomacy.

He urged re-election of Mr. Roosevelt as "the one person who is most responsible for arousing America of the danger lurking outside of our borders."

11 FLEE FIRE

Woman, 61, Faces Arson Charge After Tenement Blaze.

CINCINNATI—(AP)—A 61-year old woman was charged with arson today after fire in a lower-town tenement routed four adults and seven children from their fourth floor domiciles.

She is Mrs. Catherine Brabant, proprietor, who according to Sergt. Harry Wessels, insisted on two occasions to tenants who smelled smoke a few hours before the blaze was detected, that there was no fire.

Mrs. Brabant was sent to General hospital for observation.

PLANT EXPANDS

Lorain Ore-Extracting Firm To Add More Capacity.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The Brush Beryllium company announced today plans for further expansion of its plant at Lorain, O. Exact size of the new addition has not been decided, the announcement said.

The plant capacity was doubled by recent changes. The concern extracts beryllium from an ore and manufactures beryllium copper, an alloy used in making electrical equipment.

FACES CHARGE

H. H. Sobol, wanted in Mansfield for giving the General hospital a bad check for $12.56, was held today by Cleveland police, county authorities said.

Deputy Sheriff Glenn Freeman said Sobol gave the hospital a check dated ahead, promising to have the money to cover it on a certain date. It came back, however, marked "no funds."

It was expected that Sheriff E. P. Long or a deputy would return Sobol to Mansfield today or Saturday.

LASSER OFFERS NEW PROPOSAL

Security Union Head Would Replace WPA With Family Benefit Payments.

A proposal to replace WPA with a plan that would give "the head of every family $15 a week and take the relief stigma from workers" was outlined to about 200 persons last night by David Lasser, president of the American Security Union, who spoke at the Richland county Security Union headquarters, 15½ North Park street.

Lasser, who formerly headed the national Workers Alliance organization, a union of WPA workers, said WPA "no longer serves the needs of the country by providing adequate jobs at living wages."

He said the Security Union's plan would "improve working conditions, give every man a living wage, and not make him feel like he is a second class citizen, working for relief."

Lasser said the plan would be financed by "taxing the idle wealth of the country." It would provide $15 a week and a job for all men for whom government jobs are available and the $15 anyway if the man has a family and in unable to find work. Each man unemployed worker would be required to file a statement of his financial status and earnings from part-time jobs. The money he earns from other sources would be deducted from his $15 government payments.

He urged the unemployed and WPA workers to "go along with Roosevelt" and charged that the "Communists are lining up with Willkie."

Lasser resigned as head of the Workers' Alliance and organized the American Security union when he learned the Alliance was "full of Communists," he said.

Lasser was in Mansfield yesterday and today to arrange for the opening of a state Security union office here.

Names Presented To 'Hall of Fame' At O. S. U. Tonight

Two more names will be added to Ohio Journalism's Hall of Fame tonight at a banquet in the faculty club of Ohio State University, and one of them will be that of a Mansfield man.

William A. Duff Ashland, will present the name of Frank G. Carpenter of Mansfield, and W. E. Beeler, Chillicothe newspaper man will present the name of Nathaniel Wills of that city.

Mr. Carpenter, newspaper man, traveler and writer died in 1924, while Mr. Wills who came from Boston to establish the Scioto Gazette in Chillicothe in 1799, died early in the 19th century.

Attending the banquet from Mansfield will be the two nieces of Mr. Carpenter, Mrs. John S. Hattery and Mrs. E. R. Hartman; Dr. Hattery and Mr. Hartman, John W. Graham, general manager of The News-Journal, and Mrs. Graham, G. J. Kochenderfer, editor of The News-Journal, and Mrs. Kochenderfer.

PLAN FOR PARTY

Clifford Hagedorn, chairman of the Phi Sigma Chi fraternity social committee, announced today that a Halloween party will be staged by the fraternity in the organization's club rooms Saturday at 9 p. m.

All members are required to wear masks and entertainment and refreshments have been arranged for the party, Hagedorn said. The party is the first in a series to be given by the fraternity during the fall and winter season.

OLD PLANT BURNS

135-Year-Old Milling Company Building Destroyed.

RAVENNA — (AP) — The 135-year-old plant of the Vandervelde Milling company at Garrettsville was a smouldering ruin today after a $25,000 fire. Investigators believe the blaze may have been started by children.

They were playing in a storage area of hay and straw shortly before the fire was discovered there around midnight. The mill built in 1805 contained several thousand bushels of grain.

RADIOS TURNED ON TO 2,200 HEAD SETS OF O. S. R. INMATES

At exactly 5.15 p. m. yesterday Supt. Arthur L. Glattke snapped a switch in his office at the Ohio State reformatory and music resounded throughout the 44-year-old prison.

Gathered in the superintendent's office were other institution officials to dedicate the reformatory's new radio reception equipment.

The dedicatory program marked the first time in Ohio that radio equipment has been installed in a penal institution.

In a master control room behind the grey walls of the prison was installed a huge reception panel tuned to three wave channels, covering the major radio networks.

From that room, wires have been laid to all parts of the institution, and to 2,200 head sets in the two huge cell blocks that house the inmates.

The installation completed yesterday afternoon, represented six weeks of work by engineers. It cost $7,500, the funds representing profits from the inmates commissary.

The funds have been held in trust at the institution.

Besides the head sets for the inmates, two huge trumpet speakers were installed in the recreation yard and two in the prison chapel.

The equipment consists of four audio amplifiers of 80 watts each, tuned to the three radio reception bands, and fourth serving as a public address system.

From his office, Glattke can shut off the programs and use the public address system to make special announcements and for paging purposes.

"It will also prove beneficial in the event of emergencies," the superintendent said, pointing out that guards could be summoned over the speakers.

The radio is in operation daily from 6 a. m. to 7 a. m. and from 5 p. m. to 9 p. m., and on Sundays from 6 a. m. to 7:30 p. m., 10 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., and from 4:30 p. m. to 9 p. m.

All programs are censored by Chaplain Martin Wappner, the programs scanned in advance for material that would not prove of a "moral and spiritual value."

BOWLERS TO BE FETED AT PARTY

The affair is for the 48 teams of the Westinghouse bowling league and their friends. There will be dancing, prizes and special stunts from 9 to 12 p. m., with the Westinghouse orchestra playing for the affair.

Arrangements are under the supervision of Jack Hanrahan and Henry Heiser, president of the league.

DRAFTEES TO BE HONORED HERE ARMISTICE DAY

First 400 on List Will Be Guests of Legion; Parade Plans Formed.

Mansfield men whose draft numbers were in the first 400 drawn will be guests of McVey Post, American Legion, Armistice night, it was announced today by Commander M. Earl Saltzgaber, as first plans for observance of the day were outlined.

Sam V. Fox has been named general chairman on arrangements. He said today that the Legion wanted every man whose number had been drawn in the first 400, and therefore most likely to be called to training in the next few months, to march in the Armistice night parade.

They will be invited to assemble at the Legion home immediately after the parade to be addressed by Judge C. H. Huston, a major of the World war.

The Legion will hold open house all day for war veterans and plans are under way to make the evening parade representative of the entire community. R. B. Gardner will be parade marshal.

No activities are planned for the day except the annual ritual at the Doughboy monument in Central park when the Legion auxiliary with an honor guard will place a wreath of memorial poppies at the foot of the monument.

NEW OFFICERS

Girl Scout Organization Has Revamped Leadership.

A re-arrangement of officers of the Mansfield Council of Girl Scouts places Mrs. John W. Graham at its head as commissioner, filling the vacancy left by the recent resignation of Mrs. Roger Black.

Mrs. Graham has been active in Girl Scout executive work for several years and has been treasurer of the council. Mrs. H. L. Ackerman was named treasurer to succeed Mrs. Graham.

Mrs. A. W. Melhack succeeds Mrs. Ackerman as secretary and Mrs. L. W. Layton becomes chairman of organizations, assisted by Mrs. Milo Hieber, Mrs. Tom Ford and Mrs. Stanley Richardson. Mrs. M. T. Wollcott was named Juliette Low representative.

A meeting of the council was held yesterday at the Chamber of Commerce rooms at which time Mrs. Graham and Mrs. Ford gave reports on the recent Girl Scout convention held in Dayton. Mrs. Hieber reported that three new troop leaders had been added to the council's staff. They are Miss Carolyn Wollman, Miss Barbara Hartman, and Mrs. G. E. Masqueher.

DAVID'S BACK ALREADY? - I THOUGHT HE EXPECTED TO BE GONE SOME TIME!
HE DID, CLARE - BUT SOME-THING WENT WRONG OUT THERE
DON'T REPEAT ANY OF THIS - DAVID TOLD ME ABOUT WHAT HAPPENED - SABOTEURS HAD PLOTTED TO WRECK A LARGE MOTOR PLANT ENGAGED IN DEFENSE PRODUCTION - THE F.B.I. LEARNED IT FROM A MAN---
---ONE OF THEIR MEN WHOM THEY KEEP PLANTED THERE AS A WORKMAN - THE DAY WAS SET TO BLOW UP THE WHOLE PLACE - HUNDREDS OF MEN WOULD HAVE BEEN KILLED - A HORRIBLE PLOT!- DAVID, IN CHARGE OF A LOT OF G-MEN, RUSHED OUT THERE
...BUT HE AND HIS MEN WERE SPOTTED AT ONCE -THOSE TERRIBLE PLOTTERS KNEW THEY WERE COMING EVEN BEFORE THEY GOT THERE! - SO NOTHING HAPPENED - THEY WERE AFRAID TO TRY IT!
NOW, HOW DID THOSE SPIES AND SABO-TEURS LEARN OF THE F.B.I.'S MOVE-MENTS?

STOCKS KEEP UP RECOVERY IN EARLY DEALS

Issues Advance Fractions In Market Today; Steel Company Shows Profit.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Leading stocks extended Thursday's recovery push by fractions in today's early market dealings.

Market analysts studied the Bethlehem Steel statement which showed unfilled orders at the end of the third quarter exceeded $1,000,000,000 as the result of heavy shipbuilding and ordnance contracts.

Some cheer was derived from the fact that the company, despite a jump in tax reservations to $24,500,000, was able to register net profits of $3,36 a share in the last three months, second best in the concern's history.

into the Greek-Italian war on the side of the Axis.

Before he spoke, Inonu had conferred with Major General Smith, chief-of-staff of the British Near East command. Turkey has a mutual defense treaty with Britain.

The president spoke warmly of Soviet Russia. "Soviet policy in the face of a dark world is one of the greatest security," he said.

Inonu told the assembly, nevertheless, that nothing was being spared to "complete the needs of the republic's army."

Bulgaria Fears New Complications

SOFIA, Bulgaria—Indications of increasing German military activity in Rumania—nearest base for any Nazi attack upon Italian-invaded Greece—stirred fears here today of complications which might involve this country in the war.

As the Italian offense against Greece entered its fifth day without evidence of notable success, unofficial reports from Rumania said the German armed forces there had reached a new high level of strength.

Although given no credence by government officials, rumors persisted that "German troops may go through here within 10 days" en route to the Greek border.

The Bulgarian government itself adhered strictly to a hands off policy, making no move to take advantage of the Greek plight by pressing its long-standing claims for territorial revisions.

Russians Reported On Strategic Isle

BELGRADE — (INS) — Reports from Bucharest that Soviet Russia forces have occupied an island in the Danube Delta coincided with word today that German troop trains have been speeding eastward through Rumania for the past two days.

Advices from the Rumanian capital said the Russians occupied Chilia island in the Danube River Delta, a maneuver whereby they have obtained virtual control of the Rumanian Danube Delta canal as well as Sulina.

It was understood that the Russians during the Danube River conference insisted that Germany should not occupy positions beyond Galatz, and that the Reich complied with this Soviet demand.

THOUSANDS LINE PARADE ROUTE

Halloween Night Brings Out Huge Throng to Watch Masked Marchers.

rolls of serpentine and confetti flew through the air. Legionnaires aided city police in maintaining order.

The parade, which formed at Park avenue west and Sturges, moved promptly at 7:30 p. m. under the direction of Walter L. Beckley, general chairman, and Arthur Busch, parade marshal.

It was headed by the American Legion Drum corps and a float of the Legion auxiliary. The float was all in white and centered with the American flag on a standard and a basket of memorial poppies.

The Senior high school band, several floats and the parade of maskers followed. The column marched down Park avenue to Mulberry, down to Fourth and over to Main, up Main to the square and around Central park. All of the maskers marched over a big platform, equipped with flood lights. South Main, between North and South Park street was jammed with spectators.

V. H. Lodde, chairman of judges, handed out the cash prizes and as two contests were not completed, the prize money was given as special awards to persons wearing striking costumes.

The patriotic theme was a favorite one last night and two special awards were won by couples representing Uncle Sam and Miss Liberty. Among the finest costumes were those worn by two children from Crestline. They were Dixie Lee Caldwell and Paul Winemiller, who were given $10 in cash. Their costumes were of red, white and blue satin. Another $10 special award went to Solores Morrison, 207 Harker street and Mary Gretten, 618 Bowman, who were dressed as Uncle Sam and Miss Columbia.

The Junior Association of Commerce won first prize of $35 for its handsome and patriotic float. From a small loud speaker on the float came the strains of the national anthem.

Second prize of $20 for floats went to John Mayer, 312 Wood streeet, for a comic—and corny—reminder of "the good old days."

A small white Peter Rabbit, looking startlingly like the little fellow in the cartoon, was Barbara Foncannon, Highland avenue, who won first prize of $10 for the best newspaper and movie cartoon character. James Garrison, 56 Lexington avenue, a Mickey Mouse in gay red velvet trousers, won second prize, $5. No awards were made in the adult contest in this classification as there were no entries eligible for prizes.

First and second prizes of $10 and $5 for the finest costumes for women were won by Luella Bennett, 245 Clairmont avenue, and Norma Herndon, Galion. In the same class for men, first prize of $10 was won by Lester Young, 131 South Adams. No second award was made in this class.

There were eight prizes for the most comic costumes, with $5 for first and $3 for second. Winners among the men were George Graham, Galion, first, and William Ragon, 218 West Fifth street, second; while the women's awards were won by Ethel Hunter, R. D. 4, first, and Veldron Coleman, Galion, second.

Children's comic awards were won by Margery Brigham, 84 Raleigh avenue, first for girls, and Ramona Armstrong, 38 North Adams, second; David Carver, 205 Hedges street, first for boys, and Richard Smith, West Fourth, second.

Little Sherry Diane Fike, France street, won the $5 prize for the best bicycle entry. She was a small Uncle Sam in satin suit, high silk hat and chin whiskers and her bicycle was decorated in red, white and blue.

The best dog entry, Topsy, led by Mrs. Robert McCullough, 618 Bowman street, won the $5 award.

Judge for the contests last night were V. H. Lodde, Herbert Gibbs, Sam Fox, Loren Holmes, James Carrigan, Mrs. Samuel Harkins, Mrs. Robert Jones, Jane Williams, Joseph Blahnik, Earl A. Nist and R. M. James.

This was the second year that the American Legion sponsored a community celebration on Halloween.

BICYCLE TROOPS

Italian Army on Wheels Used In Greek Campaign.

ROME—(U P)—The Italian infantry has unleashed a secret weapon against Greece—a bicycle built for two.

The "driver" sits on the front saddle with a rifle dangling over the handle bars. On a saddle behind rides a light machine gunner, his weapon fixed in a stand.

The "bikes" were designed for Greece's narrow roads They have two-wheel brakes, three-speed gears to facilitate travel over hilly country, and can be folded like an accordian and carried on the back up steep paths. The tires are solid rubber The bicyclists follow special mountain-climbing motorcyclists into the attack and are said to be faster than cavalry.

Kobi lived on a moutain-side in Switzerland. He wanted most to become a yodeler and to be able to herd cows all alone. He made a wish about being a yodeler and it came true in a very strange way, but in order to become a cowherder he just grew. Then one night his chance came to save the herd in a storm. KOBI, A BOY OF SWITZERLAND, by Mary and Conrad Buff is the book to ask for when you want to read this story. The pictures are as beautiful as the story.

When Mari was nine she was taught to help with the housework. Everyone worked on the island of Oland because it was very hard to make a living there at any time. Mari learned to help and then she knew what to do when Farmer Bro and his boys needed help at their house. August Bro was a lame boy and had to use crutches, but he had a fine time when he and Mari were taken to the mainland of Sweden to hear Jenny Lind. Any girl who likes a tomboy wil like Mari's story in THE COPPER KETTLE, by Annette Turngeen.

WRONG PILLOW

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(INS)—Oliver Graham went to sleep with a railroad track as his pillow. A freight train struck him and the engine and three cars swished by. An excited crew rushed back to the spot, to find Graham sitting up, stupefied. Too low for the cowcatcher, his head had been pushed aside, by the wheels. He had a headache, however.

HIT VIOLATORS

TOKYO, Japan —(INS)— Japan believes in fines for its violators of the National Mobilization laws. Forty dealers in staple fibre, convicted of illegal sales above the fixed price for their commodities, were fined a total of Yen 950,000, or better than $200,000 in American money. Ten other executives of lesser importance, were fined Yen 5,000 each. It was the third so-called 'ring' of illegal sellers arrested by police.

ON PROBATION

Father Wins Court Leniency on Delinquency Charge.

John Kurtz, 43, of R. D. 4, was given a six-months suspended workhouse sentence and was placed on probation for a year yesterday when he pleaded guilty in probate court to a charge of contributing to the delinquency of his two minor sons.

Judge C. J. Anderson imposed the sentence and then suspended it because Kurtz is working and his family needs his earnings, the jurist said.

The charge, filed by Mrs. Kurtz, accused the father of becoming intoxicated and using profane language in the presence of his sons, four and 15 years old.

CLUB CAR SERVICE FOR LONDON SUBWAY AIR SHELTERS PLANNED

LONDON —(U.P.)— Subway officials announced today a club car service for the benefit of persons using the stations as air raid shelters this winter.

Food trains will operate from 80 stations dispensing dinner and breakfast. Since the approaching cold weather will increase the need for warm food during the long night raids, and since it is impossible to use open flames to cook in the subways because of improper ventilation, electric hot plates and urns will be used in the train diners.

The trains will move from one station to another. Tea, coffee or chocolate will sell for two cents a cup; meat pies, sausage rolls and buns, cakes, apples and biscuits, for four cents an order. The guests must provide their own crockery. Serving hours will be between 6:30 and 9:30 p. m., and 5 and 7 a. m.

The London passenger transport board employed 1,000 waitresses for the diners and is providing special dormitories for them in which to sleep between evening and morning service.

The Westminster council also prepared for a winter of air raids by arranging for 100 shelters, to accommodate 100,000 persons, mostly in the basements of large buildings. Season tickets will be issued for three-fourths of the space but they will be canceled if the holder or any member of his family commits an offense, creates a nuisance, fails to do his share in keeping the shelter clean or fails to use the ticket four nights in succession without adequate explanation. These shelters will have two or three tiers of beds, sanitary arrangements, electric lights, air conditioning and canteens.

Trench shelters are to be dug in Hyde Park, fitted with bunks, to accommodate several thousands more.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1940.

It is being confidently predicted that neither presidential candidate will carry both Maine and Mississippi.

Word comes that votes can be bought as low as a quarter apiece in Chicago—which indicates lack of competition.

Interest might have been increased in the draft lottery if an occasional number had indicated appointment to a captaincy—but unearned captaincies are apparently reserved as special favors.

Change In Party Alignments

ONLY a few days remain for "undecided" voters to make their decisions. The evidence is practically all in and final arguments are being read and heard. The great jury of fifty million American voters is getting ready to return its verdict—a great privilege which some do not fully appreciate.

This verdict will go far toward shaping the destiny of the United States for the next four years, and possibly for much longer into the future.

It will serve to test public opinion on the third-term tradition which has heretofore been held inviolate by both major political parties and their honored spokesmen.

It will reveal the views of a majority of voters toward a steadily increasing federal debt, without regard for a balanced budget; a great enlargement of lists of government employes; failure to solve unemployment problems, and wasteful extravagance in carrying through public works projects.

Possibly to a greater extent than ever before, it will bring about a new alignment of voters, because of obvious differences in the political philosophy of Democrats and New Dealers, as reflected in governmental policies and also in the attempted breakaway from the third-term precedent.

Some idea of the wide departure from customary political party procedure is gained from considering that Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee for the presidency, is a former Democrat, and Henry A. Wallace, Democratic nominee for the vice presidency, is a former Republican.

Many factors have entered into making this the most interesting national campaign in many years—and one in which the "silent vote" may play a surprisingly important part in determining the result.

A Dream Marched With Them

MERRYMAKERS in frolicsome costumes deriving their inspiration all the way from Hawaii to Bedloe's island and the "back hills" of Tennessee moved in orderly parade last night under the glimmer of red and green flares between thousands of onlookers lining the city's downtown streets.

They were demonstrating, over and above their observance of an ancient festival, that careful planning on the part of public-minded citizens and an ideal long pursued can turn helter-skelter rowdyism into a fine display of organized community spirit.

For, the dream of Fred Hunt, who many years ago organized Mansfield's first Halloween parade, marched happily with them. The dream had to be remembered. But needing no other reminder than their presence were members of the American Legion, who marshalled the paraders amiably, and Mansfield policemen and Boy Scouts who handled traffic and the crowd smoothly.

Yes, last night was a contrast from the time when celebration on the Eve of All Hallows in Mansfield meant the building of rail fences across Main street and the widespread destruction of property.

It is not a solitary contrast, however; other cities have turned to similar community celebrations as an outlet for the spirit of fun. Perhaps one can quote aptly that the event did "shine like a good deed in a naughty world." Perhaps there is hope that on a larger scale nations will one day see the advantage of inter-action over international vandalism.

Perhaps nations need to pursue a dream like that of Fred Hunt.

Boys Who Should 'Know Better'

KEEN REGRET is the first reaction to the story of a number of Mansfield high school students being involved in a type of Halloween "prank" that included malicious damage to property and behavior entirely out of accord with good manners.

It has been so consistently the practice of The News-Journal to promote the interests of schools, and to commend the activities of students, that it is difficult and distressing to adopt another tone toward young people who, at the cost of taxpayers, are privileged to enjoy these exceptional educational opportunities—without appearing to realize that they also have a responsibility to the community in which they live and an obligation of proper respect for the property rights of those whose money supports the school system.

While younger children, lacking home discipline, may be excused for mischievousness that sometimes approaches vandalism, no such leniency can be claimed for boys approaching young manhood and who are soon to be entrusted with the duties of citizenship.

Neither in homes, schools or communities can such conduct be safely tolerated—if those guilty of it are assumed to be approaching capability for self government, which has its basis in appreciation of the rights of others, rather than in a freedom of "self expression" that is unrestrained by discipline.

It is unfair that the misconduct of a few should reflect unfavorably on an entire school and this seems to be one of the cases in which parents and school authorities may be able to act more effectively than the courts—except in assurance of compensation for damage done.

Sidewalk Displays Banned

AS A HEALTH MEASURE, and also to avoid sidewalk obstruction, decision of the city administration to stop the display of merchandise on sidewalks in front of stores, is in accord with the modern trend toward better sanitation and greater public convenience.

An earlier ordinance had permitted use of three feet in front of stores for display of merchandise, which was once common practice in many lines of business. This ordinance was later amended, however, to entirely ban the use of sidewalk space in this way.

In all probability no more than a word to the affected merchants will be necessary in order to secure voluntary observance of this ordinance—as might also be the case with some other unenforced laws.

It appears to many that the temporary strain of two terms in the presidency is enough to ask of any man.

Pot of Minestrone

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

IF THIS ARTICLE smells of garlic, peppers and basilico, don't blame the linotype man! I'm the villain! For I've just come from the vegetable garden with the makings of a pot of minestrone in my apron—and the grand smell of it on these typing fingers.

Never heard of minestrone? What a lot you've missed! Never, in all the range of human fodder was there more mouth-watering fare than this savory Italian soup. But I warn you—it takes more than a list of ingredients to make good minestrone. You've got to go back. Back to the hunger that gnaws at each human's heart as well as his flesh. Back to the simple, elemental things that alone can feed that hunger and make life a lusty adventure instead of a limping retreat. Back, f'instance, to the patch where these roots and herbs grew.

It's cool there now, at 6 a. m., with the dawn barely silvering the cobwebs on the pumpkin vines, and the first light glinting like tinsel on the tall bean-poles. Between the poles, close to the damp, dim earth, the darkness clings.

And in the woods which edge the clearing, it's still night. Here in this half-wild space, grubbed from the heart of the California Sierra, the minestrone begins, with something of the wilderness' savage savour seasoning each root and pod.

Stout mountain soil . . . sunlight as lusty as the forest wind . . . and human hope and hunger, sweat and pride. These lie behind my pot of minestrone. The makings? Anything you find, according to the season of the year. It's fall now and the high tide of the crop has passed. But still there's food enough inside our garden patch to feed a regiment.

Those wide, flat beans from Italy, which Yankee kitchens seldom see. Kohlrabi, celery, onions, tomatoes and succini, parsnips and carrots, artichokes, summer squash and Brussel sprouts. And, from the herbs, a pungent handful of sweet rosemary, tarragon, thyme, bay leaf and marjoram. All crackling crisp with dew and unctured, somehow, with the smell of cedar, fir and pine.

Good, common stuff, heaped in a wooden bowl. When breakfast's done I'll sort and slice it for the soup, adding it slowly to the bacon sizzling in the old, black pot . . . covering with water, clear as splintered crystal from the granite depths. No frills or fuss about our evening meal. A wooden table and a bunch of zinnias. The big tureen abrim with minestrone, its smoking thickness topped with grated cheese. A crusty loaf of bread I've baked myself, a glass of warming wine from our own grapes, a dish of home-grown fruit. Then quiet hours around the fireplace with books and homework, apples, drowsy talk.

Good, common stuff. Yet the best of life is made like that. Not from mad risks and flaming spectacles, but from simple, quiet happenings, happenings we hardly notice at the time.

But when the fret and froth of life are done, when all the flame and fury shall have passed away, we will hold fast to those few things which gave us lasting joy, and know their worth. We will forget the glitter and the glare, the noisy triumph and the frantic feud, and see, at last, that that which counted most was plain and honest as that pot of soup. As elemental, yet eternal, as its roots and leaves.

A hearty base of work and self-respect . . . good laughter and the precious nourishment of love . . . a dash of dreams . . . a spice of recklessness. And always something for the Other Fellow's need. These are the things on which we really feed. Or, lacking—die.

How November Got That Name

—By JEAN NEWTON

BECAUSE it was a period of wild winds and unruly waves, the Saxons called it Wind-monath wind-month.

Also, because it was then that they killed their livestock to set up their meat for the winter, they called it Blot-monath blood-month.

The Romans, who bequeathed to us the name we know it by, bestowed it after the Latin numeral novem nine, because until the calendar was revised by Pope Gregory, it was the ninth month.

Now, but for the modesty and good sense of a Roman ruler—but let us to our stickful's end.

It was suggested to Tiberius, second emperor of Rome, who was born in November, that since his predecessor Augustus had had a month named after him (August), he too should be similarly distinguished by having the name of his birth-month changed to Tiberius to commemorate him.

He declined the proposal, remarking:

"There are but twelve months. What will you do if you have thirteen Caesars?"

And November it has remained ever since.

This Is Ohio

OHIO ranks sixth in the production of wheat in the United States. It is exceeded by Kansas, North Dakota, Montana and Oklahoma.

Prospects on Sept. 1, were for for a crop of 42,758,000 bushels, an increase over an annual 10-year period of 40,212,000 bushels. The Ohio yield per seeded acre has averaged 20.1 bushels an acre, compared with the national average of about 12 bushels an acre.

Wheat is used in Ohio primarily for food, livestock feed, and seed. A considerable amount also is exported.

Timely Editorial

A Captain Elliott Hop.

Young men out in Cherokee county, Ia., will give a pre-election dance—an "I Want to Be a Captain, Too," dance. This social event out where the corn grows tall will be in recognition of the marvelous agility of Elliott Roosevelt whose long jump from civilian status lands him in a $316-a-month captaincy. Likewise this Iowa dance will honor 1,965 Cherokee county young men registered for the draft.

It's a great idea, unprotected by copyright or patent. Such dances should be held throughout the country this week, or not later than next Monday night. They would dramatize a popular demand for more equalization upward of opportunities in the military service; for more and better commissions at larger salaries for more inexperienced soldiers.

Let there be rigid adherence to the precedent set up by Elliott Roosevelt's appointment, and all the drafted men will be happy. There just wouldn't be any privates. Toledo Blade.

Everyday Poem

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

Living In the Future.

He planned for this, he planned for that.
The future held him fast.
He was so occupied with it
That all his time he passed

Arranging it. The present he Ignored. It sped away.
Quite lost to him. He never took
His fill of now, today.

For plans are subject to great change;
He could not carry through
Dreams as he wished and always be
Was planning them anew.

And so it was he lost what he
In present should have found.
So busy in the future's maze
He wandered round and round.

Urges Economy.

Editor News-Journal:

As citizens we should insist that all expense of government, local, county, state and national be judicious, waste, useless spending and all non-essentials be tabooed.

The expense of armament, for defense alone, will be enough to try the patience and test the mettle of every American.

The U. S. A. should not appropriate money for any purpose beginning now unless definite taxes are levied, at once, for any needed funds not now in hand.

Is it the American way to continue to saddle a prodigious public debt on coming generations, they to pay for our present wild jamboree?

Could they sing "Paris of Our Fathers, Living Still"?

Those with bequests to make above wholesome amounts to get endowments and others could well show their patriotism by leaving much of such property to the U. S. A. to cut down the public debt.

Obviously few estates will be left to the government so long as the heirs know of so much waste in the government even during the days of their lives.

Must we be warned against slothful and efficiency by taxing ourselves with wasteful foolish personal habits which we have fallen into—and have not the grit to break up many cases costing more than the tax of government?

Hitler's Hope to Dictate Peace Explains Shift of War to East

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—To analyze the Axis drive in the Mediterranean one must keep in mind the basic policy Hitler outlined to his general staff in the early days of the war.

He decreed that it was better to lose three million men in the first year of the war than four million men in four years of long drawn out suffering.

What he now sees is the unwelcome prospect of a long struggle in which the synthetically cooked up morale of the German people would be pitted against the dogged determination of the British. That is why he is so vigorously reshuffling the war map with the idea of shutting off Suez and Gibraltar, then cutting off the British Far Eastern trade route around Africa at Dakar.

He wants to make the odds so overwhelming, at least on paper, that the British will yield to a dictated peace. Unquestionably the odds against the Empire are serious, not only on paper but in fact.

Most U. S. military observers agree that Hitler can take both Suez and Gibraltar unless the Russians actively intervene, but it is doubtful, regardless of the odds, that Hitler can force his own peace on the British. Inside fact is that sub rosa peace feelers have been put out again and again for some time.

Usually they come from Swedish sources, sometimes are conveyed by prominent Frenchmen, but always are vague on an on-and-if, but-and-when basis. They are just persistent enough, however, to indicate that Hitler would like to make peace if he could pretty much dictate the terms. And those terms might well mean a free hand with the British fleet for Hitler to penetrate Latin-America.

After all, the Nazi argument regarding this can be very convincing to the British. Why should England and Germany, the argument runs, destroy their factories and set back their trade for years, only to let the United States take advantage of the situation by extending itself in Latin America? Why not patch up a peace on the basis of the Far East for Britain and Latin America for Germany? There is plenty of room in the two areas for both and no reason why the United States should spread a flimsy Monroe Doctrine over an empty continent.

So runs the German argument, and it can be made very plausible to beleaguered and desperate British business. However, there is not much chance of it being accepted now. But should American aid to Britain diminish, then the British appeasement group might have its way.

Censoring John L.

DURING most of his life, John L. Lewis has refused to take censorship or dictation from anyone. But before delivering his famous radio broadcast for Wendell Willkie last week, he meekly bowed before the Republicans and permitted at least one extract in his speech to be deleted. He had submitted the draft two days in advance to Republican leaders, since they were paying about $45,000 for his radio time.

The censored portion of the speech referred to the pro-labor congressmen and senators who are up for re-election this year. Because these men have gone down the line for labor, the CIO has been giving them every possible help. Twenty-six of these congressmen are in coal mining districts, are strong for the United Mine Workers, but also are pro-Roosevelt.

Lewis had written a plea in his speech for labor to re-elect the friends of labor—referring to these men. However, since these 26 pro-labor congressmen are being opposed by Republicans, the COP leaders objected. Lewis bowed to their censorship.

Note—John L. Lewis' offer to resign as head of the CIO if Roosevelt is re-elected was as empty as his offer to step down from the CIO if Bill Green would quit as head of the AFL. In either case, Lewis would remain head of the powerful United Mine Workers, a job which pays him $25,000 plus expenses reputed to be around $60,000.

Lewis is sure of re-election as head of the miners, since the nominations closed in August, and he is the only candidate. Vice President Phil Murray was supported by 198 locals for the presidency, but refused to oppose Lewis.

Willkie and Copper.

ON THE platform of the New York Herald-Tribune Forum, when Wendell Willkie made his attack on Roosevelt for knocking the pins from under 17-cents-a-pound copper, was Defense Commissioner Leon Henderson, price expert who was chiefly responsible for the price cut. The vital defense metal is now selling around 12 cents.

When Willkie concluded, Henderson turned and saw seated directly behind him the head of one of the leading brass companies, who the day before had sent Henderson a long telegram complaining about the price of copper. He had asked for a conference on the question of lifting the 4-cent tariff so he could buy 8-cent foreign copper.

Standing out on the business executive's lapel was a big Willkie button. Eyeing it, Henderson observed with a mischievous grin:

"Well, fancy meeting you here! I really would have enjoyed this speech if I'd known you were in back of me. What did you think of your candidate's views on the price of copper?"

"I'll tell you when I see you in Washington," was the dour reply.

Merry-Go-Round.

NOW is the period of an election campaign when both sides let loose the below-the-belt stuff, and this campaign is no exception. The two chief candidates, Roosevelt and Willkie, are taking no part in it, but the smearing that is going on behind the scenes is perhaps a little worse than usual. . . . To prevent profiteering on the vast supplies of food that will be necessary for the enlarged Army and Navy, Defense Commission experts are making a survey of all food stocks in the country, while discussing plans with agriculture department officials for the purchase of farm surpluses. . . . Representatives Usher Burdick and William Lemke of North Dakota fought shoulder-to-shoulder in previous elections, but in this one they are foes. Lemke, running as an independent for the senate, has two candidates in the field against Burdick. . . . Dies Committeeman Joe Starnes of Alabama has come to the defense of Representative John Coffee of Washington, who is being accused by his Republican opponent of opposing the Dies investigation. Starnes sent Coffee a letter commending his support of the committee.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Hat check girls have made curious Broadway history from time to time. I remember one who whipped out a knife and stabbed a dancer one night because this dancer was shining up to her Sugar, a philandering Romeo who played fiddle in the orchestra. There was another who married an undergraduate at Columbia and moved with him to Mexico, where she became a bridge expert. Likewise famous among New York nightclub hatcheck lasses is Renee Carroll, who is now assisting in editing Stage Magazine. We asked her for a few "definitions" of types encountered in NY's pubs and clubs, and this is what she gave us:

Tripster—a person who comes to look at the celebrities . . . John D—a guy who tips only a dime . . . Brass Peddler—one who counts out your tips in pennies. . . . A heavyweight is the fellow who checks seven or eight bundles, including rubbers, umbrella, coat, hat, etc., for only a dime. . . . But if you only check your hat and leave a quarter tip, you're a lightweight.

Our palm for the fellow who knows how to adapt himself to a changing situation goes this week to Jimmy Dorsey. Playing a neighborhood theater the other night, Bob Eberle (the vocalist) was launching into one of his feature numbers when all the lights went out. . . . That left it squarely up to the boys to keep right on playing. However, to favor Eberle with a "spot" light, Dorsey whipped out a paper of matches and, lighting one after the other, held them in Eberle's face until the number was over. The hand they got for this number was the heaviest of the week.

ADDED notes on "The Thief of Bagdad:" June Duprez, who plays the Beautiful Sleeping Princess, is worried sick about her brother, an aviator now interned in Finland. . . . She hasn't had word of him in three months. . . . This is her first American picture. . . . She was seen briefly in "Four Feathers," but all of that film was produced in England. . . . Rex Ingram, the giant Negro who plays the Evil Genii, will be on Broadway with Ethel Waters and a notable cast soon in "Cabin in the Sky." . . . Sabu, the little "thief," is a Mohammedan. . . . He tells you the British are a cinch to win the war. . . . The villian of "Thief" is our old friend Conrad Veidt of silent days who was a great hit in "The Man Who Laughed." . . . Veidt must be well into his forties, perhaps close to fifty. . . . He is lean, hard, and seemingly young.

DINNER last night at the airport was exciting. You sit over your steak gazing through the terrace windows out over the world's longest runways. . . . Like giant fireflies, with their landing lights aglow, the big planes arrive and take off every few minutes. . . . I counted 16 transports taking off for every section of this great, vast America. Washington, Atlanta, New Orleans, Pittsburgh, Kansas City, Los Angeles. . . . Suddenly a big bomber dropped out of the sky and taxied gently over to one side. . . . What was it doing at LaGuardia field? . . . Well it was dinner time and a couple of the boys had looked in for a bite and a chat.

A Farmer's Diary

Food for Thought

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

GREAT UNCLE MALACHI lived on a hundred hilly acres and died as he slept, at the age of 93. He reared seven sons and three daughters who lived to do him credit. He fed them well but they had to "clean up their plates, for 'twas sin to waste good victuals." He taught them all to work, to pray and to keep out of debt.

One time a neighbor whose land bordered Uncle Malachi's on two sides, tried to buy great uncle's farm for one of his boys who had just married.

"I'll not sell it to you," said Uncle Malachi. "This is home to me and mine."

"But you could take the money and buy a bigger farm."

Uncle shook his head, with a glint in the blue eyes, under their shaggy brows.

"No, this is home. 'Taint for sale. I've got land enough, I reckon, and I tell you, my friend, that you're foolish to give your own land so much."

"I promised each of my four boys a farm when he married," returned the other. "Same as I promised each of 'em a watch when he was 16 and a horse and rig when he was 21. So far I've been able to keep all my promises. My boys'll be independent. 'Keep your farm' I tell 'em 'and your farm'll keep you.'"

Uncle Malachi shook his head. "I know a proverb, too," he said. "'Enough is better than a feast!' It ain't the land he owns that makes a man rich. I'd rather a boy o' mine knew how to live well on a little farm—then when he was able, he could buy the big one. This farm right here is all I need. I'll keep it."

"ENOUGH IS BETTER THAN A FEAST" has been handed down as a memoir of Uncle Malachi. Time after time it has proven true that the man who must struggle for enough becomes abler, wealthier, more worthwhile, by his very struggle, than the man who inherits everything. There is a noble ring of self reliance to the old proverb that, to my mind, is still worth thinking about.

CHAPTER XXVII

"Miss Britton," the older woman began, as Lena went noiselessly into the bedroom and closed the door, "just a few suggestions. The countess has moved into Norma's room; you knew that. It seems as if she can't get near enough to the dear child, now that they're together again. I brought up Janet Lockey," Miss Sanderson continued, after another sharp "hem!" as Jocelyn said nothing, but sat watching her steadily. "You knew that? I had her from the time when she was eleven. She had lost her mother, dear child. I was with her everywhere. When they put her into a German school, an Italian school, I boarded there with her. And I think I may say I discharged my trust carefully. Hem! to the best of my ability, at least.

"She was very young, of course, when she married Mr. Philip. Too young, perhaps, but her father never refused her anything, and indeed he was very fond of Mr. Philip, too. Three years later, unfortunately, they quarreled, as young people will—"

"I thought she left him for a man named Caverley," Jocelyn put in coldly at this point. Miss Sanderson scowled.

"She was very young," she said frigidly, "and whatever she did was done more in mischief than in—in any spirit of—or recklessness. She had been dancing with Captain Caverley a good deal, and I suppose I may say flirting with him—"

"I suppose you may," Jocelyn said dryly in the pause. The other woman gave her a glance, and her face darkened with a dry flush.

"I heard them laughing one afternoon, down on the lawn. That very lawn out here, under your windows. And quite suddenly Miss Janet—as I called the countess then—came flying into the house and packed an overnight bag, and they were gone. It was an escapade, she herself had no idea how serious, and we know now that she afterwards regretted it very deeply. She was only with the Captain two years, and after that," said Sandy, with the tone of one giving her great credit, "she did not marry anyone for seven years. Not anyone!"

"That was something," Jocelyn said approvingly. Again Miss Sanderson looked at her sharply. "How long before she and Mr. Fordyce were divorced?"

"A year. He applied for a divorce immediately, but under the California law it took a year. She wanted him to go to Reno, but he said he could not be spared for six months."

"She didn't go to Reno?"

"She couldn't. The Captain was stationed in some New York place. She lived near him, and after the year was up they were married. It was very uncomfortable for her, of course, but her father was with her."

"Oh, her father was with her?"

"Certainly. He joined her immediately. Otherwise — hem!" said Sandy elegantly, "it would not have looked very well."

"Under the circumstances how was it she got Norma for a quarter of the year?"

"Under what circumstances? There was nothing extraordinary in the circumstances."

"When I first worked for Fordyce, Sawyer & Fordyce," Jocelyn said, "the girls in the office said it was an elopement with Captain Caverley."

To this Miss Sanderson made no reply. "It was because of her father that she got the baby some of the time," she said shortly. "But indeed, we musn't gossip this way," she interrupted herself, drawing her shoulders up primly. "I came to say that Mrs. Fordyce and Mr. Philip and the countess and Norma have all gone over to the club for dinner. I see Lena's brought you yours."

"All together!"

"Certainly. The countess has a great many friends here, and she said she wanted to give them a surprise."

"But—good heavens! Fourteen years after their divorce!"

"They have seen each other in that time. As a matter of fact Mr. Fordyce saw her in New York the last time he was there, in the banker's office," Miss Sanderson said stiffly and uncomfortably.

Jocelyn was silent for a moment, looking into the fire, her head whirling, and the other woman was silent, too. Suddenly Jocelyn asked over a sick sense of defeat, "And what is the plan now?"

"I dare not hope for a reconciliation now, although I pray for it, as his mother does," Sandy said piously. "But I do dare to hope that there will be a friendly adjustment. It is my confident belief that Mr. Philip has never loved any other woman, and I think her coming to him tonight stirred him to the soul. Hem! Stirred him to the soul!"

"Norma said something tonight of taking a place in Hawaii and having a coming-out party there."

"Her mother wants to take her there for a few months, her father perhaps joining them later. Just what the arrangement will be, I don't know. But Mrs. Fordyce asked me to give you this."

She leaned forward, a pink slip in her hand. Jocelyn looking at it blankly; looked up. "What's this?" she asked, her cheeks reddening.

"That's the countess's check for three months' services, Miss Britton, and she asked me to express thanks for all of them for the kindness you have shown to Norma."

A dozen phrases came to Jocelyn's mind; she discarded them all and sat silent, staring at the paper. Sandy was not worth her fire.

"Now, when, would you want to go?" Miss Sanderson pursued it gently, inflexibly. "Any one of the men can drive you into town whenever you like. Tuesday? Wednesday?"

"I would like to say goodbye to Norma and Mrs. Fordyce tomorrow," Jocelyn said after a moment. "I could leave in the afternoon."

"I'll arrange that, then," Miss Sanderson's voice sounded as if she strove to conceal her content. "You see none of us will be wanted since the countess herself is taking Norma in charge," she went on tactfully. "Of course, she's always been devoted to the child, but moving about so much—"

"I may accompany them to the island," she recommended after a moment, as Jocelyn remained silent. "But that would only be as the countess's companion. She may want me to go."

Jocelyn was too crushed to speak. But she would not give Sandy the satisfaction of witnessing her agitation. She stood up, folded the check and put it under the mantel clock. Her look indicated to the other woman that the interview was over. Sandy rose, too, and moved to the door; her grizzled head was inclined toward Jocelyn, but her eyes as always evaded the other's eyes.

"I'll tell Mrs. Fordyce and Norma that you'll see them in the morning?" she said on a rising inflection.

"Please." That was all.

Jocelyn was alone. For a few minutes she would not let herself think. She stood in the center of the room, deliberately routing her thoughts, denying the swarming emotions as fast as they rose.

"I'll read," she said aloud. She seated herself, picked up her book. The fire crackled softly, and the spring night wind whispered about her windows. Jocelyn turned a page; turned another page.

It was no use! She flung aside the book and went to the window and opened it, kneeling down with her elbows on the sill and her eyes straining out into the dark.

"I've fallen in love with you," Philip had said. "The most natural thing in the world for anyone who is in your neighborhood at all is to fall in love with you."

And now—now—! Jocelyn suddenly put her head down into her hands and began to cry.

In the morning she had her breakfast upstairs and finished her packing, hoping, praying every minute that Philip would send for her. But ten o'clock came, and eleven, and there was no word.

It was almost noon when Lena came into say that Mrs. Fordyce would like to see her, and Jocelyn, with a fast beating heart, went to the big beautiful bedroom to find the mistress of the house at her dressing table, Annette busy with her hair.

"Yes," said Mrs. Fordyce, lightly, nervously, as Jocelyn came in. "Good morning. What's it trying to do, rain? Well, I suppose Sandy told you last night that all our plans have changed."

"That's what we must get used to, in this world," Sandy herself said with a resigned smile. She was sitting knitting industriously in a chair close to the dressing table.

"The countess is going to take Norma with her to Honolulu," said Mrs. Fordyce. "Whether they'll sail as soon as Saturday or not I do not know. Phil could turn his reservation over to Janet I should think."

"Mr. Fordyce isn't going?" Jocelyn asked, instantly heartened by the thought.

Mrs. Fordyce made no answer to this. Miss Sanderson held off her knitting and eyed a row of purling. "He will follow later," she explained.

"Then there's nothing to do but say goodbye," Jocelyn said. She extended a hand to Mrs. Fordyce, who wiped cream from her own hand on Annette's apron before taking Jocelyn's hand and saying, through the mirror, "Goodbye and thank you, so much!"

"Goodbye, Miss Sanderson," Jocelyn said, retreating.

"Goodbye, and good luck I'm sure," said Sandy, sweetly, and without punctuation. She did not look up from her knitting.

Across the hall in Norma's rooms Jocelyn found the girl scribbling away madly at her desk in a new gold-bound diary that, she explained, her mother had bought her.

"No more lessons!" Norma exulted. "Mama says I'm too advanced for them. After all, travel educates, Mama says, and meeting all the strange people I do, and having my own way of judging them. Mama laughs and laughs at me, she says I'm not quite like anyone else, and I guess that's true, because I remember when I was only a tiny baby . . ."

It went on and on. The old mad childish babble of things she didn't understand, didn't remember correctly, was quoting from some boasting tale of her grandmother or mother. Jocelyn listened for a while, a careful half-smile on her face, and then asked Norma if she would say good-bye for her to her mother and father.

USE AIRPLANE TO HERD GAME

Texas Antelope Trappers To Descend From Air To Bag Quarry.

DALLAS, Tex. —(U.P.)— The Texas Game Department for the first time will use an airplane this fall in trapping antelope in West Texas, Will J. Tucker, executive secretary of the department, has announced.

Trapping of antelope on overgrazed areas and transporting them to greener pastures is necessary, Tucker said, because an antelope will not clear a three-foot fence or barrier.

In the past, 12 horsemen have been used in driving the herds into corrals, where they were crated for shipping. Tucker said four men will handle the work this fall because a plane flying no lower than 500 feet can turn a herd at will in whatever direction desired.

The hunting of antelope in Texas is forbidden now because over-shooting decreased the number to a few thousand.

If airplane herding is successful, antelope may be placed on several hundred additional sections of West Texas, Tucker said. More than 200 sections of land were stocked with the pronghorns last year. Antelope do not thrive in wooded areas and are grazed in the open land of West Texas.

In addition to rounding up antelope, the plane may be used to make large farm surveys, Tucker said.

HOLD BANQUET

GALION—The annual banquet for the Past Masters of Galion lodge, No. 414, F. and A. M., was held Thursday night in the Masonic Temple. More than 30 were present for the dinner which was followed with the election of officers. Guy Cook was chosen president; Clyde Kunkel, vice president; and Frank Thomas, secretary. The out-going president is Dr. M. S. Matthias.

Sets New Husking Record

Winner in the national corn husking championship held near Davenport, Ia., Irvin Bauman of Eureka, Ill., is shown being congratulated by Bob Feller, star pitcher of the Cleveland Indians, who acted as one of the starters at the husking bee. Bauman's net score was 46.71 bushels, setting a new national mark. A crowd of 125,000 saw the championships.

TOWN FROLICS

Ashland Holds Parade, Dances To Observe Halloween.

ASHLAND — Halloween was celebrated community style here Thursday night. Clubs and communities as well as individuals vied for distinction by masking and entering the parade.

Music was furnished by three bands, the Ashland High School band, the all-county band and the Old Timers band, as well as novelty bands distributed throughout the parade processional. Prizes were awarded for various classifications, the judges reviewing the parade from a stand erected at the corner of Main and Center.

Following the street fun open house was held by the Junior Chamber of Commerce and dances were held in several halls.

It's a pretty safe plan to judge a man by the people he doesn't keep company with.

Worked on Newspaper Unscathed, Entered Kitchen and Just Look.

McCOMB, Miss.—(AP)—It's said the newspaper business is a tough game for a woman—that a woman's place is in the home.

But Editor Elizabeth Millard of the Pike county Herald, who's gone unscathed from her journalistic experiences, reported that as a result of her duties in the kitchen since she married recently she:

Cut one finger peeling potatoes; scraped another digit grating nutmeg; scalded the other hand in dishwater; bruised her hip falling down the kitchen steps.

AND IT WORKED

LOGAN, O.—(AP)—Not having the money to buy one, Elmer Neil and Glendale Robinson made a bull fiddle out of cheese boxes, orange crates, a hickory limb, a mop handle, a washtub and an old fence post. It worked so well that they used it with the high school orchestra.

ITALIAN PLANES BOMB HARBOR AT EDGE OF ATHENS

But Greek Land Troops Drive Back Invaders; Navy Aids Infantry's Attack.

slow and that the Italians had not penetrated more than 10 miles into Greece at any point up to early yesterday afternoon. It was added that Greece was receiving abundant supplies of British munitions.)

British Planes Bomb Naples

ROME — (AP) — British warplanes, striking for the first time at southern Italy, roared over Naples during the night and unloaded explosive and incendiary bombs some of which, the Italian high command acknowledged, fell in two of the city's great industrial suburbs.

A communique said one person was killed and five injured during the raid, but minimized the material damage.

(The British air ministry said the raiders scored hits on oil tanks and "other objectives" at Naples.)

Several bombs fell at Bagnoli, four miles west of the city, and at Pomigliano D'Arco, eight miles to the northeast, the high command said.

Some of Italy's biggest blast furnaces and steel mills are located in this region.

The communique did not indicate from what direction the raids were launched.

(Long range British bombers have flown all the way from England on a number of occasions to attack industrial cities in northern Italy. Reports from various sources that British forces have been landed recently on Greek islands, however, raised the possibility that the Naples raiders may have operated from new bases in the Mediterranean.)

Italians Push On Toward Janina

OHRID, Jugoslav Frontier—(U.P.)—Greek forces in northwestern Greece are offering stiff resistance to Italians advancing on Janina, now only 21 miles from the city, border dispatches said today.

Dispatches said that Italians scored an advance on Janina during the night and now were 20 miles inside Greece.

Italian detachments which started from the Albanian frontier village of Vidohova, almost due southeast of Korca, crossed into Greece today and advanced about two miles, occupying the Greek village of Karelista.

It was reported that Italians in the northern sector late yesterday advanced a mile and a half towards Florina along the main road from Salo to Noka but were halted near the village of Besvinie by storng Greek fire.

After sharp skirmishing the Italians were said to have been dispersed in panic. It was claimed that 49 Italians, including an officer and two sergeants, were captured by the Greeks in this engagement.

Nazi Raiders Over Britain Driven Back

LONDON—(U.P.)—British fighter planes routed a fleet of German fighter-bomber and Messerschmitt fighter planes and six planes believed to be Italian heavy bombers over the southeast coast of England today.

Engaging the raiding planes, numbering about 40, as they raced across the coast, the British planes scattered and chased them southward before they had a chance to drop bombs.

Several bombs dropped in the outskirts of London during the second of two daylight air raid alarm periods before noon, but otherwise the morning was unusually tranquil.

A quiet night ended the most peaceful week London has had since the aerial blitzkrieg started Sept. 7. There were two short night raids. Gun fire was heavy but there was little bombing.

Charges Roosevelt Leads U. S. Into War

ROME — (AP) — Virginio Gayda, authoritative fascist editor, accused President Roosevelt today of initiating an offensive against the Axis and held him and his supporters responsible for creation of an "ideological political conflict which is skidding toward belligerency between the United States and the Axis."

The editor of Il Giornale D'Italia, who often reflects official Fascist opinion, said he was answering a recent speech of United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Hull's speech, he said, "proceeded again to change the elementary truth of the facts, inventing an Axis menace to America." He invited "these bellicose Americans" to furnish "one single, concrete, documented proof" of this menace.

He repeated, however, that Italy was not interested in the outcome of the United States' presidential election.

ROOSEVELT ON TRI-STATE TOUR

Speaks In Brooklyn Tonight, Then Comes to Cleveland For Saturday Talk.

En route from Brooklyn to Cleveland on Saturday, he will make train platform appearances at Rochester and Batavia, N. Y., and spend two hours motoring around Buffalo, visiting two aircraft factories and a steel plant.

The last platform appearance before Cleveland will be at Erie, Pa., where he will make his second appeal for Pennsylvania's 36 electoral votes. His first was at Philadelphia last week.

The Cleveland visit will be his second to the Buckeye state during the current campaign. Ohio has 26 electoral votes.

The White House said that if world conditions demanded, the chief executive would return directly to Washington from Cleveland, instead of going home. In that event his Monday night radio speech presumably would be made from the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt's day yesterday was taken up by work on his speeches, conference with Secretary Hull on foreign affairs, a visit from Archbishop Spellman of New York, and a quick trip in the late afternoon to nearby Bethesda, Md., where he dedicated the new $4,000,000 plant of the national institute of health.

He said there that "neither the American people nor their government intend to socialize medical practice any more than they plan to socialize industry."

Early Apologizes To Negro Officer

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— White House Secretary Stephen T. Early today had offered his apologies to a Negro policeman, James Sloan, of New York who charged that Early kicked him in the groin last Monday night.

His apologies also were offered to Lewis J. Valentine, New York City police commissioner.

In a statement, Early denied that he had attacked or kicked any officer during an altercation with New York policemen at Pennsylvania station shortly before President Roosevelt's party entrained for Washington Monday.

On his return from New York Tuesday, Early said he was "shoved around" by a squad of New York City policemen and, in the fracas, kneed one of the officers who was pushing him.

Wallace Invades Ohio Second Time

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— Democratic campaign forces opened a final drive today to carry Ohio for President Roosvelt for the third time.

Henry A. Wallace, the former secretary of agriculture and Democratic vice presidential nominee, arrived in the state this morning for his second campaign tour.

Mr. Roosevlet himself carries the fight into Ohio tomorrow night when he speaks in Cleveland.

Wallace's schedule called for an automobile tour through central and eastern Ohio with stops for political talks scheduled for: New Philadelphia, Coshocton, Newark, Lancaster, Zanesville, Cambridge, Cadiz and Steubenville.

3 Rallies to End Campaign For Dems

Three rallies tonight and another Saturday night will conclude the Democratic campaign in Richland county, party leaders said today.

Ralph C. Lutz, Democratic candidate for 17th district congressman, will speak at meetings tonight in the Union rural school auditorium in Weller township and the Adario town hall.

In Mansfield, the Richland County Young Democratic club will dedicate its headquarters at 11½ North Main street tonight with a rally and "open house." Atty. A. S. Beach, veteran Democratic campaigner, will speak. The meeting will start at 7:30 p. m.

Miss Mary Newcomer, head of the Young Democratic club, said the headquarters would be retained permanently by the group.

Gov. Bibb Graves of Alabama, a leading southern Democrat, is scheduled to speak at a Democratic rally at 8 p. m. Saturday in the John Simpson junior high school auditorium. There will be speakers in behalf of the state and county party candidates, Marshall Moore, campaign chairman, says.

The session will be one of three major rallies of the campaign for Richland county Democrats. It will close the series.

Delano Lodge Backs Roosevelt

Delano lodge comprised of workers at the Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company, today announced support of President Roosevelt for a third term.

Members of the union, a CIO affiliate, took the action despite the endorsement of Wendell L. Willkie, Republican presidential candidate, by John L. Lewis, CIO president.

The action was taken by approximately 200 members who attended the meeting, D. R. Fields, of the union's legislative committee said.

The union has a membership of about 800 steel workers. Howard Leach is president.

Charges Roosevelt Leads Us Toward Conflict and Internal Collapse.

closed he had asked the defense priorities board to give "most sympathetic consideration" to a British request to order 12,000 more planes from American manufacturers.)

"I was surprised by the use, in such a superficial manner," he said, "of an effort so vital to Britain and our own safety. I cannot understand the propriety of speaking in a political speech, as if from the White House; of making campaign material of the duties of the president of the United States."

Declaring that he had entered the campaign determined "insofar as I could, to present a solid American front against the world in this dangerous hour," Willkie continued:

"Accordingly, I went the limit in supporting certain elements of the third-term candidate's position in foreign affairs. . . . This attitude of mine has been called, by the third term candidate, 'political sterility' and 'me-too' stuff.

"I was willing to forego use of some of the most telling points against Mr. Roosevelt's rashness in foreign affairs. But my opposition was not willing to let it rest at that."

The president, he contended, has refused to debate "our great domestic issues." Willkie asked why, and replied to his own question by saying:

"Obviously, because he couldn't. In every field after a record of failure, he has only to offer that he has spent almost sixty billions and increased our national debt by twenty-four billions—and accomplished no recovery whatever."

Willkie scheduled only two talks today—at New Brunswick and Elizabeth, N. J.—before sending his campaign train to a New Jersey siding for 24 hours parking.

Hoover Hits at Dem 'Hysteria'

LINCOLN, Neb. —(U.P.)— Former President Herbert Hoover last night denounced the foreign policy of the New Deal as one of "hysteria" that might get this nation into war.

Mr. Hoover called for election of Wendell L. Willkie to offset "the hundreds of acts which tend to drag us toward war" committed under President Roosevelt.

He proposed:

1 Furnish all the support to England of which the United States is capable "within the law."

2. Stop cultivating "hysteria" at home and "sticking pins in Tigers abroad."

Louis Booed But He Keeps On Talking

NEW YORK—(AP)—Joe Louis, heavyweight boxing champion of the world, was booed at a Republican political rally in the heart of Harlem last night, but he took it like a champ.

"You boys," said the imperturbable brown bomber, "can boo 'til you get blue in the face . . . but I'll just keep on talking."

Looking down at his hecklers, he declared, "I'm used to boos—and I win anyway."

This brought a wave of cheers.

He was up there to urge the election of Wendell L. Willkie. Police estimated 3,500 to 4,000 negroes jammed into a ballroom to hear him, and that 3,000 to 4,000 waited outside.

"If Mr. Willkie is elected," said Louis, "he has promised in writing to put over the anti-lynching bill. Roosevelt has been in office for eight years and done nothing about that. The people in the north don't know how long is eight years."

Before departing for Buffalo to continue his tour in behalf of Willkie, Louis acknowledged that he was growing a mustache—had been growing it for two weeks.

"I call it my political mustache" he said. He plans to remove it on election day "no matter who is elected."

Louis' campaign itinerary includes Buffalo and Cleveland today, and Dayton, Cincinnati and Indianapolis tomorrow.

Willkie Parade Set For Tomorrow

Richland county Republicans virtually closed their series of campaign rallies with a meeting last night in Shelby, but the Richland county Willkie club will sponsor a parade in Mansfield Saturday afternoon and carry their campaign right up to election next Tuesday.

A near capacity crowd heard Don Hornbeck of Cleveland, president of the National Young Republican Federation, speak at the Shelby meeting in behalf of Wendell L. Willkie for president. G. O. P. candidates for county offices were introduced.

Congressman J. Harry McGregor, who was scheduled to speak at a big party rally tonight in G. O. P. headquarters here, will speak at a Townsend meeting in the same room in the Warner building.

The room had previously been rented to the Mansfield Townsend clubs for the night, and since Congressman McGregor had planned to speak here anyway, Townsend leaders invited him to address their club. The session will be open to the public.

Ralph Hardy, county Republican executive chairman, said no other party rallies have been scheduled before election. He said campaign workers would spend the rest of the time getting out the vote Tuesday. A Young Republican dance will be held Saturday night at party headquarters.

The Willkie parade will get under way at 1 p. m. Saturday at Park avenue west and Sturges avenue. It will travel through the business district.

The caravan will include four units with the themes: "Youth Needs Willkie." "Labor Needs Willkie," "Farmers Need Willkie," and "Defense Needs Willkie."

group. It was reported that since the army has 17,000,000 men from which to choose 800,000 draftees by June, 1941, it would seek conscripts in lower age groups. The army, it was said, prefers men from about 21 to 26.

It was pointed out that men who are given a year's military training under the conscription law are liable for service for 10 years. Thus, if a man were trained when he was 35, he would be liable to service until he became 45 years of age, and men of 45 do not make good soldiers, army officials claimed.

The army, it was reported, would rather train men from 21 to 26 so that they would still be comparatively young if they were called up during the ensuing 10 years.

It was estimated that only 5 per cent of the 17,000,000 men who registered Oct. 16 would be called for military service during the next eight months, or by June, 1941.

After June 1941, it was learned, the army probably will depend on youths coming of age for its conscripts. It was believed that all youths now 20 who become 21 years of age by next Sept. 16 would be forced to register under the draft law shortly after that date. Another national lottery also may be held to give them order numbers.

Approximately 1,300,000 youths will become 21 by next Sept. 16. It was estimated by draft officials that at least 85 per cent of them could meet army physical requirements. The army is allowed to call up 900,000 men annually for training, and it was believed that starting next winter it would draw on the 21-year-old class for conscripts. However, only 69 per cent of the coming 21-year-olds will be needed to fill the 900,000 quota.

Appointment of nine inspectors to act as "trouble shooters" in administration of the draft law in Ohio was disclosed today by Adjutant General Gilson D. Light, state selective service chief.

The appointments, made by President Roosevelt, carry $3,000 annual salaries.

Major Harold L. Hays, who will take a leave of absence as superintendent of the state Boys' Industrial school, will be named chief inspector as soon as his national guard papers are cleared in Washington to permit his induction in the federal service.

The inspectors will be assigned to the nine appellate court districts in the state. All are civilians, although some are retired national guard officers.

The district inspectors are:

Specific district assignments have not been made.

One of the inspectors, it was reported, was ill and may have to be replaced. His name could not be learned.

CONTINUE HUNT

Police Seeking Assailant of Former Chorus Girl.

CINCINNATI — (U.P.) — Search continued today for the person who brutally attacked Mrs. Pauline Dawson, 22, former chorus girl, and left her unconscious on a street.

She was in a hospital today with a skull fracture after being found almost unclad early yesterday by George Howard, janitor.

Police were unable to find any witnesses to the attack. Spots of blood for a distance of 100 feet indicated the victim struggled fiercely with her attacker.

Republican Leadership for STATE and NATION

The issue is clear in the coming state election:—Whether to retain the decent, solvent, business-like administration instituted by Governor Bricker — or return to the welter of extravagance, inefficiency and deficits which characterized the regime of his present opponent and predecessor in office. John W. Bricker has kept his promises. He cleaned house and rooted out waste in state management. He kept Ohio within its income and asked for no new taxes, no increase in old taxes. He paid off millions of the inherited debt and still showed a surplus in the State treasury instead of a deficit. He reduced expenses, yet provided more dollars for every essential service—relief, schools, pensions, highways, etc. — than did his predecessor. John W. Bricker has again made public office a public trust. There have been NO SCANDALS during his administration. Vote for Governor Bricker and retain Ohio's solvency and self-respect.

Wendell L. Willkie does not think that the Constitution and the Bill of Rights are "horse and buggy" stuff. He knows that democracy is doomed, unless the government again becomes the people's servant, not their master. He believes that laws should be passed by Congress, not made by bureaucratic decree; that courts must be independent or our liberties will vanish. To create an invincible national defense, America must have confidence and prosperity within. Workmen want steady jobs, not relief. Farmers want parity markets, not doles. Business needs encouragement under fair regulation, not throttling restrictions. Eight years of ever-growing Presidential dictation and federal borrowing have failed to cure the depression or make the country secure. There is no valid excuse for the third term. ONE-MAN POWER MUST GO. If you love America, get behind Wendell L. Willkie. Elect him by your vote.

America must be strong enough to meet any crisis which threatens. Ohio is a pivotal state. It must keep itself strong by retaining the clean administration of Governor Bricker and electing Republican legislators and officials who will support him. It must help make the nation strong by electing Harold H. Burton to the United States Senate, and Republican Congressmen to the United States House of Representatives. Protect your ballot. Vote both the Republican National Ticket and the Republican State Ticket next Tuesday.

Add the milk boldly when making biscuits. Pour it all at once into a "well" made in the flour-shortening mixture. Stir lightly, just until the flour is moistened. A fork is the gentlest mixer. Two cups of hard wheat flour require about ¾ cup milk; 2 cups of soft wheat flour require about ⅔ cup milk.

Make flaky biscuits by kneading on a slightly floured board for ½ minute or by using 5 to 6 "pat out, fold over" motions. Be gentle with the dough, and be sparse with the flour on the board. Like a best dress, biscuit dough has a right and wrong side, so after the kneading or patting starts, keep the same side up.

TIPS FOR BISCUIT-MAKERS

Biscuits are the quickest of quick breads, quickly made—and quickly eaten, too. However, as in all cooking, take time to measure the ingredients carefully. Measuring is a speedy procedure when the kitchen is supplied with inexpensive standard measuring spoons and cups. Most important of all—sift flour once before measuring it.

* * *

Two ingredients—shortening and milk—should be cool for biscuit making. Flakiness and tenderness depend upon keeping the shortening in small, unmelted pieces, which kneading will distribute in very thin layers between layers of flour. Cut the cold shortening into the flour mixture with a fork, two knives, or a pastry blender, until the mixture looks like coarse meal. Shortening may be crumbled into the flour with the tips of the fingers.

* * *

Make crusty biscuits by rolling the dough thin and leaving space between the biscuits on the baking sheet. Make soft biscuits by placing them close together for the baking.

By MARIANNE

AS ALWAYS about this time of the year, news begins to come back about Mansfield collegians at their various schools, and as usual, they're busy with all sorts of campus activities. . . . Mary Gage, who is a junior at the University of Michigan up in Ann Arbor, is on the staff of editors of the Michiganensian (student yearbook). . . . She also served on the staff of the 1940-41 edition of the Student Directory, which has just been published. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Gage and is a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority at the university.

Speaking of staff editors, Fred Haag is busy now with his work over at Ashland college, where he is editor of the campus yearbook. . . . And this week marked the beginning of the taking of student pictures for publication. . . . The pictures will be a little different this year, because the group photos are being taken in different places rather than all at one place—with the various settings representative of what the group stands for. . . . Fred's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Haag, Marion avenue.

Mrs. Paul McConnell left yesterday for Lynchburg, Va., where she will spend this week-end with her daughter, Elsie, who's a student down there at Randolph-Macon Women's college. . . . Incidentally, this is Elsie's second year at the school, and she's a member of Chi Omega sorority now. . . . Another out-of-town vacationer is Ralph O. Wise, who's been in New York City this week.

His Mansfield friends will be interested in hearing the latest news about Private Jack V. Shephard, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Shephard. . . . He's been stationed with Battery G of the U. S. Army at Fort Upton, Long Island, N. Y., and just sent word to his parents this week that his battery will sail on Nov. 4 for Panama, where they probably will be stationed for about two years.

AN IMPORTANT OCCASION for Judge Lewis Brucker this week was the celebration of his birthday with his twin sister, Mrs. Francis McNally of Flushing, Mich. . . . The two have always celebrated together, and for the past five years have alternated between here and Flushing. . . . Judge Brucker's granddaughter, Mrs. James Eberly, and his granddaughter-in-law, Mrs. Lewis McCullough, planned a dinner party in honor of the twosome at the Mansfield-Leland hotel. . . . There were 20 relatives present, and later they went to the Brucker home for a social evening. . . . Mrs. McNally's son, daughters and daughter-in-law came down with her for the party—Mr. and Mrs. Frank McNally and Miss Lena McNally of Flushing, Mrs. Roy Hood and Mrs. Anna Kerr of Detroit.

GOODBYE AND GOOD LUCK: It is with reluctance that we bid farewell to two Mansfield couples. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Ben Esgar left today for Cleveland, where they will make their future home at 12039 Edgewater drive. . . . And tomorrow Mr. and Mrs. Eldred Brague are leaving for New Albany, Ind., to take up residence.

RELIGIOUS services for the 37th Ohio Division at Camp Shelby, Miss., are as much a part of the camp schedule as the drilling of troops, and so each Sunday 18 services are held in the area and on Saturdays' confessions are heard. . . . The nine regimental bands assist with appropriate music. Rev. William P. O'Connor of Dayton is the senior chaplain, and Rev. J. E. Marshall is one of 11 ministers assisting him. . . . Rev. Marshall, as you probably recall, was formerly pastor here at St. Mark's Lutheran church.

United Presbyterian Division Has Session

There were 14 members and four guests of Division Two of the Ladies' Aid society of the United Presbyterian church present for a meeting in the church parlors Wednesday evening. Mrs. J. W. Waddell led the devotions, and Mrs. Frank Williams conducted the business.

Mrs. W. E. Shane and Mrs. Harry Martin were in charge of the social hour which followed. Mrs. O. F. Garver has invited the members to her home at the Ohio State Reformatory for the next meeting, Nov. 29, when Mrs. Frank Hartman will be her associate.

CITES DOZEN REASONS FOR ALL-YEAR PLAY

City Recreation Chairman Builds Case For One-Mill Levy.

(Editor's Note—This is the fifth and last of a series of signed stories by city officials explaining the need for passage of the one-mill levy at the Nov. 5 election and how the levy will benefit their respective departments. Today's article deals with functions of the recreation department.)

* * *

By FLOYD DENT

(Chairman City Recreational Board)

Here is an outline of a dozen reasons why a year-round recreation program is needed in Mansfield:

The need for self expression through play is a year-round need.

The impulse to play is universal: the craving for self-expression a human need. Without the satisfaction of this need, the life of the individual cannot be well balanced. Health, education, work, religion—all the great elements making for well rounded living are constant daily factors. Recreation as one of these elements cannot be on any other than a year-round basis.

It is essential to the life and growth of the child.

It is instinctive and necessary for children to play every day in the year. Play means growth. The responsibility of the community to the child requires the provision of safe places in which to play and the provision of leadership. Year-round recreation guarantees the child his birthright of health and happiness

It is necessary to the well-being of the adult.

Modern working conditions make it imperative that the worker find expressive activities outside of work hours. Every normal being needs relaxation to offset the strain of his daily work-needs a share in the community's recreational life to satisfy his craving for companionship.

For most of us work continues throughout the year. Play which re-creates and throws off the fatigue of the day must go hand in hand with work, twelve months of the year.

Not only the individual but the community needs recreation.

A community finds its soul in community pageants and celebrations, in community singing, in all events which bring its citizens together on the basis of their mutual interests.

A community which is not participating throughout the year in these morale-building activities is losing one of the greatest opportunities it has to make for community solidarity.

It attracts and utilizes the highest type of leadership.

The secret is success in community recreation in leadership—through a private or municipal group responsible for the development of the work and through a year-round executive who administers activities. If an organization is to be active and vital, if it is to attract to its membership strong community leaders, it must be permanent, functioning the year round, not merely during the summer months.

The administration of the leisure time program of the community requires the services of an able paid executive. There are few such executives who can consider short-time employment The best workers seek positions which will employ their best powers continuously throughout the year.

It is essential to a well-rounded program of activities to meet the needs of individuals and groups.

The changing seasons make possible varied programs, each with its appeal. Winter sports are rapidly increasing in popularity. Indoor recreation centers during the late fall and winter months help inestimably in meeting the social, recreational and cultural needs of the individual.

Spring and fall bring a large variety of outdoor sports Summer makes possible playgrounds, picnics, community gatherings, concerts, swimming, camping and countless other delights.

The welding of these activities into a unified whole is imperative to a program which will be community-wide, expressive of interests of all.

BENEFITS derived from short-time recreation programs justify their extension throughout the year.

Playgrounds are health and character builders In physical efficiency constant exercise and play are the things that count. Play as a health building function cannot be limited to summer months. Experience has definitely proved that playgrounds mean decreased juvenile delinquency and the setting up of standards in sportsmanship and fair play.

Juvenile delinquency is not a seasonal occupation Is it the part of wisdom to limit good citizenship training to a few months of the year, to make it a seasonal activity?

It is important to continue to reinforce the school program.

The school does not occupy the full time of children during the school year Their free time in the late afternoon, after school has closed and on Saturdays, presents a challenge to the community Year-round recreation is necessary to realize to the fullest extent on the investment made in school years in physical education, music and drama

Every school child has developed through his school training an interest and skill in these constructive recreations. If he is to continue to be of value through life, to develop inner resources for adult years, facilities and leadership must be provided through the community during the entire year.

It is good business economy to have it.

Cities have invested millions of dollars in school grounds and buildings, most of which are in operation less than one-third of the time, and in parks and public buildings. Year-found recreation utilizes these plants for the leisure time hours and makes them count for citizenship

There is lack of economy in setting up machinery for work which is carried on for only a part of the year. Long terms of inactivity mean duplication and waste. An annual appropriation for the year's work permits of wise and economical budgeting. The benefits of summer playgrounds are so largely lost by cessation of activity that year-round programs are demanded by considerations of economy, efficiency and practical results.

It is essential to municipal efficiency.

Year-round recreation helps make a city a good place in which to live, making it interesting to its own citizens and attractive to outsiders.

The existence of an effective year-round recreation system is in any city a material consideration, sometimes a controlling factor in decisions as to whether manufacturing plants shall be established in a given city.

Families in considering a change in residence from one city to another are more and more asking what recreation conditions prevail.

Modern city conditions demand it and it is a definite part of the responsibility of a modern community to provide it.

With the shortening of the number of working hours and a corresponding increase in the amount of leisure, with living conditions in our great cities driving people outside their homes for recreation, with automobiles and trucks constantly endangering the lives of little children, the right use of leisure time and the provision of places for play have become a matter of urgent community concern.

Whether the hours of leisure are to become assets or liabilities rests, to a large degree, with the community. Private individuals cannot, except in a few instances, provide their own playgrounds. The provision of facilities and leadership is the concern of all, and as much the responsibility of the community as is health. It is something for which taxpayers are willing to pay and are paying, and for which most states are making provision through law.

People want it.

Year-round recreation has passed the experimental stage and is an established fact. Many cities are conducting it successfully with large dividends in terms of human values. If year-round recreation did not pay, if it were not an asset, these cities would not be spending money, providing facilities employing workers and setting up machinery for activities which do not bring returns. Each year more cities are putting their activities on the year-round basis: each year more public funds are being spent. These facts are significant testimony to the value of the year-round recreation system

Mansfield has had part time recreation program for several years. The need for summer playgrounds was recognized by former Judge W. J. Bissman of the Probate court in his work with juvenile delinquents.

He found a marked decline in delinquency after the opening of the playgrounds under trained supervision. The finances were provided by popular subscription and later included in the Community Fund set-up.

In 1929 a recreation levy of one-tenth of a mill was given a 65% vote and the recreation program was supported by the taxpayers. The levy was voted for a period of five years By thrifty management of the funds and operating only the playgrounds for 10 weeks in the summer, the Recreation Board was able to conduct a summer program on a limited scale for eleven years.

The fund has finally been exhausted and unless the voters support the one mill levy on November 5, the recreation program and summer playgrounds will be just memories.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Lou Payne, widower of Mrs. Leslie Carter, was sitting in the back of a theater as a new movie scene rolled back the years for him.

There on the screen was Miriam Hopkins, playing "The Lady With Red Hair," and there was Claude Rains, white-maned Belasco in reincarnation. And there also was Lou Payne, tall, considerably younger, in the person of Richard Ainley, new English actor.

It was one of the picture's final scenes. Mrs. Carter, after quarreling with Belasco, was rehearsing a new show without his guidance. Having seen her faltering efforts, Payne had gone to Belasco, asking that he return, and this was the impresario's arrival at the theater—a joyous reunion, spoiled immediately by Mrs. Carter's discovery that her husband had sent for Belasco.

Sitting with Payne, I couldn't help wondering aloud how a man felt seeing portions of his life re-enacted for the camera before his very eyes. Lou, when he is not serving as technical adviser as now, is an actor in his own right. Once, when he married Mrs. Carter, he was a Broadway star.

"It's strange," he agreed. "Sometimes it seems as if the years literally are rolling back. But this scene—this is fiction. Much of the picture is as it happened, but not all. Actually, Belasco and Mrs. Carter never did another play together although their friendship was restored."

Is asked how he liked Ainley's performance of Lou Payne.

"Fine," he said, then chuckled, remembering a story. "Reminds me of the time I saw Alf Hampton, the comedian, in a charity show burlesquing some of our contemporary hits. Alf did a take-off on Nat Goodwin, and one day Nat saw the matinee. Afterward Alf asked Nat what he thought and Nat said, 'Well, all I can say is that one of us must be terrible!'"

* * *

Between "takes," Claude Rains is sitting alone on a camera case at the rear of the theater, wondering, he says, if they'll be through with him in time for his radio date with Shirley Temple. He is a Belasco who still looks like Rains for they have not altered the shape of his face or hidden him behind putty. Yet the effect is more of Belasco than of Rains. The famed clerical collar worn by the great producer was, as he points out, not really such.

"No I never saw Mrs. Carter" he says, "although my wife did once. She was a remarkable lady, from all I hear, and extremely theatrical. Everything she did was theatrical . . ."

After chatting awhile Claude Rains suddenly is no longer with us. He is pacing up and down a few feet away and he is muttering, half aloud: "No! No! Not that way! Caroline, have you forgotten all I taught you? . . . No! No! Not that way; Caroline . . . etc. All by himself, oblivious to his surroundings, to us, to all but his lines.

FAILS TO HOLD

DALLAS, Tex.—(INS)—The lawyer at the Dallas city jail was insistent that he be allowed to see a prisoner, held for investigation of burglary. Mindful of the rule against solicitation of jail prisoners, Policeman Hugh Hartson asked the lawyer. "Did your client call you?" The lawyer said yes, the prisoner had telephoned him Hartson nevertheless refused the lawyer a permit to visit the man—who is deaf and dumb.

DON'T TRADE FACTS FOR PROMISES!

On November 5 the voters of Richland County will choose their county commissioners for the next four years. Let us look over the past four years, and consider some outstanding achievements.

In 1937, the county had a bonded indebtedness of $600,000.00. Guy Stewart and Ray Hout have adhered strictly to a policy of wise and careful administration of county funds. Because of their refusal to sanction unnecessary expenditures, no new bond issues were required. The result is that today, Richland is free of any bonded indebtedness. No other county in Ohio, whose industrial capacity compares with Richland, can boast of such a record.

However, this policy of wise economy has not in any way interfered with or curtailed the administration of necessary projects.

Until recently, [illegible] indigent tuberculosis residents were cared for in private institutions. In July, 1939 [illegible] and began to operate the Thomas Sanatorium, for the care of these unfortunates. This [illegible], which has the approval of the State Medical Board promises to be [illegible] and economical than the previous one.

Another important [illegible] is the splendid upkeep of county roads. In 1939 and 1940 alone, approximately [illegible] of hard surfaced road were constructed in the county. It is a recognized fact, that Richland now has one of the finest county road systems in the State.

The Welfare Department caring for the dependent children and blind persons, is now functioning with more [illegible] than at any other time in its history.

Largely through the efforts of the County Commissioners the county received credit from the State Welfare Department for some $50,000.00 which the Commissioners contended represented overcharges during the past few years for the care of patients in the Feeble Minded Institution.

These Commissioners have established a program for the collection of delinquent taxes during the past few years [illegible] outstanding back taxes to the tune of [illegible] in thirty years and has provided funds of millions of dollars for the subdivisions of Richland County.

Naturally, Mr. Stewart and Mr. Hout do not claim all the credit for this splendid record However, when it is considered that they held two important administrative positions during these years, it is obvious that they are, to a large measure, responsible for it.

If you would like a continuation of this able, careful and efficient form of county government for the next four years, re-elect Stewart and Hout for county commissioners on November 5

Committee For the Re-election of Guy F Stewart and Ray Hout as County Commissioners.

Thinks Love Just Craziness

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A young man from the chivalry belt—the Deep South, where men are courteous and girls are lovely—has carefully cut from the newspaper some direful happenings which have had their origin in desperate love affairs.

He asks the question, "Isn't love just craziness?" And concludes with "I think it's got me and I'm as crazy as any of these people who've wooed their girls with shotguns—the ladies have tried pistol marksmanship too; some have drowned the beloved; others have just bashed them in the head.

"And now, dear Miss Fairfax, I've felt like doing all these things myself at times when my girl treats me like the dirt under her feet, or when she says: 'Yes, I certainly do love you,' sets the date for our wedding then changes her mind and says: 'I really don't know whether I want to marry you or not.'

"Take this fellow who tried to shoot his girl, missed her but shot two innocent bystanders, which sure was hard on them. Now the girl's going to marry him when he gets out of jail, and the college is going to let him graduate too with the rest of the class.

"Now I'm just a farm boy and probably wouldn't have the luck of this college man, who's going to get his degree, marry the girl and get a lots of fancy presents besides. What do you make of this love business? Isn't it just craziness. I think so.

"JUST A FARMER."

When a correspondent asks me what I make of this "love business," he certainly pays me a compliment I ill deserve, because everyone has tried to define love and no one has yet succeeded. There is certainly an element of "craziness" in the type of love which prompts a man to kill the dearest thing to him in the world, and, when his jealous rage has subsided, wonder why he did it.

As my correspondent says, the papers are so full of love madness these days, and the violent crimes it has evoked, that one is tempted to believe some of the war insanity raging in Europe has found its way over here. Has it broken out in these murderous happenings, to which my correspondent not only refers but sends clippings to prove his point?

The young farmer who tells me that at times he feels just as crazy as the people who do these violent deeds has much to be thankful for in the way of environment. There's a lot to be done around the farm and when he feels particularly wrought up and raging over the girl friend, he might hitch up the tractor and plow a field, chop down some trees that need chopping and, as good as any remedy, get into the old car, go to the next town, invite some other girl to go to the movies and have supper with him.

In a violent love affair when things go haywire, instead of doing something desperate, there is nothing like the counter-irritant in the shape of another girl or another man. These alternatives may not be the final solution, but they're a great temporary help.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

The nurse was first in the room, and issued a swift command as she prepared a hypodermic.

"Hold her until I get this in!"

It was a struggle for all of us, for Edith appeared determined to dash her brains out against the bed post. But when Miss Whitlock said quietly, "Please go now, all of you. I can marage her," Dicky drew me outside the room and down the hall where Lillian could not hear him.

"I've only got a minute to explain," he said. "I must get to Dad, and tell him I've got to leave here for a few hours. You remember the story I started to tell you, and you wouldn't let me finish. I spoke of Babs, the sister. I supposed, of that woman you saw in the restaurant. Ede tells me she tried to save me, double-crossed the gang—you know what that means. There's a chance I can rescue the poor kid before the gang finds her."

He stopped and looked at me, a mute appeal in his eyes. But at the mention of the name of Babs, the meanness and perversity which lie deep in every woman's heart when her jealousy is excited, were like congealing ice which ignored his appeal.

"You're going to leave your children—and your mother in this peril while you're gone on this—errand?" My pride would not permit me to add "your wife."

"It's a point of honor," my husband pleaded. "I've got to. I could never live with myself or anybody else. You don't understand. Won't you try to understand?"

A devil within me hardened my heart, and I ignored his outstretched arms.

"I understand only too well," I said icily, and turned away.

"Very well," he said dully. "If that's the way you feel. Goodbye!"

He rushed to my father's room, and a minute later, snatching his hat and coat, hurried out of the house.

In some way I got through the ordeal of dinner, and then, with Lillian and Katherine, saw to the transfer of the women and children of the household from the second floors rooms to the library. But I must have betrayed my hidden emotional turmoil, for I noticed that Lillian and Katherine were unobtrusively thinking for me, and reminding me of things they knew I wished to do.

"Didn't you want to telephone the Lansfield?" Katherine asked when we had finished with the library, and with a start I realized that Bill and Hank must have reached the city. But when I telephoned the hotel, I received a disquieting message.

"Yes, your nephews reached here about an hour ago," the Hotel clerk said, "and we gave them the money which Mr. Veritzen had directed us to hand them.

"They had dinner served in their room, and a few minutes later ordered a taxi, and left the hotel. They did not say where they were going or when they would be back. But of course we would have thought nothing of that, if it had not been for—other circumstances."

"What circumstances?" I asked sharply.

"I don't think there is any cause for alarm," the clerk said with quick professional smoothness. "But perhaps I would better tell you that they seemed much agitated, and forgot to leave the key to their room at the desk. They each had a small traveling bag, but left all their other luggage in their rooms. What would you like us to do, if anything? Of course there is no question of holding their rooms. Mr. Veritzen has that suite permanently."

"There is nothing to do." I returned crisply, "except to have them call the Sag Harbor house immediately they come in."

"We will do that," he assured me, and I hung up the receiver with a wondering fear of what could have happened to upset the boys, and an uneasiness as to their whereabouts. It was an uneasiness that grew as the evening waned, and when the telephone from the guardhouse sounded, I was seized with the fantastic conviction that the boys had come to the farmhouse.

But it was a still more amazing message that came over the wires.

"There is a young lady in a car out here who says she is a friend of Mr. Philip Veritzen, and must see him," the trooper said.

Problem of Nervous Children

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Many parents and teachers are writing me about the excitable, high-strung, fidgety child. Perhaps he bites his fingernails, chews his pencil, or must always be moving about or wriggling. Fortunately the modern elementary school affords a variety of activities for young children and they are allowed to move about rather freely so long as they do not disturb other children. But to move about almost constantly may not always help the wriggler; it may even make him wriggle more. Some high-strung mothers must be in constant action, even when they could easily be lolling. But they have never learned to discipline themselves to loll.

Mother's Letter.

"Dear Dr. Myers: I wrote you a letter three or four years ago in regard to my little girl and you gave me some good advice which I followed and I certainly did get results. . . . I wrote:

"She is eleven years old, in the sixth grade. She has made wonderful marks at school. . . .

"She is always a very nervous high-strung child. When reading she twitches the corners of her mouth. She bites her fingernails so badly you can hardly tell she has any, and I have tried everything to stop her. I have had her manicured, bought her a manicure set, but have had no success.

"When she tells anything or is talking to some one she pinches her fingers and is not conscious of it, and she gets very nervous over doing her lessons for school.

"I do want her to stop biting her nails, twitching the corners of her mouth.

"I am the cause of her ways, because I am so extremely nervous and so easily irritated, I just scream at her. It's a wonder she thought nothing of that, if it had not been for—other circumstances."

"What circumstances?" I asked sharply.

In part, I answered her: "Perhaps you need the advice of a physician for yourself and child. Certainly you need a complete rest. If possible go off for a vacation and leave the child with Dad. And don't condemn yourself; you have tried hard. While at home, let many things go undone. Just loll for several short periods a day, and lie down for an hour daily. I am sure you can eventually get yourself in hand.

"Please make up your mind that you cannot cure the mouth-twitching and nail-biting by talk. Ignore them. The child will improve as she grows more calm, as you grow more serene. Perhaps she should stay out of school a day or half-day a week. Have her lie down half an hour each day as she returns from school and an hour Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Retire your radio. Keep her from the movies for several months. Try to have more fun and laughter in the family."

HOROSCOPE

For Saturday, Nov. 2.

With concentrated energies focused upon the preparation, plans and launching of new projects on this day there is forecast for fair success, according to the lunar transits. The endorsement of those in power and standing will further accelerate quickened energies, sustaining faculties of initiative and productive ambitions.

Those whose birthday it is should respond to high stimuli of the creative forces and faculties, probably entering into new propositions with vim and determination to succeed and route a few discordant or annoying situations. The co-operation or endorsement of those in place and power should greatly advance those ambitious projects pursued with progressive ideas and concentrated and practical effort.

A child born on this day should be energetic, enterprising, probably aggressive and strenuous in pursuit of its progressive objectives. It will overcome obstacles by its determination or indomitable will.

COUNT AS YOU PLAY

MANY HANDS offer the declarer no chance to make a completely definite plan at the outset, but require him to plot a course which enables him to sound out the situation as it develops. If he keeps counting the probable number of cards in each suit in the hands of his opponents, he may ultimately uncover facts which show him the way to go home.

C. R. Rounds, of Trenton, one of New Jersey's real students of the game, had to feel his way gingerly, after West led the spade 5 and he got his first look at the dummy. Seven tricks were in sight, and if he could get through the diamond suit successfully, an eighth could come there. He could then watch developments and possibly cause a spade discard which would help.

Mr. Rounds therefore proceeded to take the spade Q with his A, having no reason for a hold-up, then played one of dummy's diamond honors. The rather high 7 from West made it look as if he was short, so the other dummy honor followed, then a marked finesse of the 10 and the A. West discarded the heart 3 on the third diamond and the spade 4 on the fourth. Counting West for originally five spades because with six he might have had them, Mr. Rounds reckoned this discard left West only three spades, three hearts to probably the Q and very likely three clubs to an honor. If this was right, he could make his game.

The heart K and A were therefore taken and a third heart led to West. The latter cashed his three spades, declarer trashing two clubs and keeping his club A and the fourth heart. West had to lead to the club, so Mr. Rounds got the last two tricks. West could have set this, as Mr. Rounds points out, by holding his spades and baring the club K, but that would have been almost too much to ask of him. As it was, the declarer made the maximum of what looked like a bad situation.

Speeds Work on Training Facilities for Ohio Guard

GENERAL RIPS RED TAPE TO BUILD RANGES

'We'll Have Things Ready When We Need Them,' Beightler Promises.

(By United Press)

CAMP SHELBY, Miss.—Major General Robert S. Beightler, a practical contractor by profession, cut through army red tape today to speed up erection of training facilities for the 37th Ohio army division which he commands.

Unable to obtain war department authority for construction of rifle, machine gun and artillery ranges, General Beightler decided to have the 37th division build their own. He assigned Major Hiram S. Perry, former chief of maintenance in the Ohio highway department and now in the quartermaster regiment, to direct the work.

"Our program calls for use of pistol ranges in four weeks and use of others in nine weeks," General Beightler said. "We expect to have them ready when we want them."

The army has allocated $350,000 for construction of the ranges at Camp Shelby but other construction work has been given priority. Efforts by General Beightler to remove the paper obstructions failed so he has decided to go ahead on his own.

Word that Ohio soldiers would have ample equipment for recreation while in camp was brought to Shelby by Lieut. Col. Frank Partridge from the army general staff at Washington.

He said that funds appropriated for recreation by congress will soon be available for expenditure. In addition, the soldiers get 10 per cent of the gross revenues of the camp canteen which expects to take in $1,500,000 a year.

NO SAUERKRAUT?

CAMP SHELBY, Miss.—(U.P.)—Major General Robert S. Beightler, commanding Ohio troops in camp here, received a letter today from Roy Irons, Clyde, O., spokesman for the National Kraut Packers' association, protesting against the omission of sauer kraut from the camp menu.

General Beightler said he did not know why kraut was not on the regular supply menu but, he added, it can be used as a substitute.

Suicide Note of Cincinnati Co-ed Puzzles Parents

CINCINNATI —(U.P.)— Parents of Elaine Ludlow, 18-year-old college student, were unable today to clarify the meaning of a peculiar farewell note found in her clothing when her body was recovered from the Eden Park reservoir.

Miss Ludlow, who enrolled in the Cincinnati college of pharmacy six weeks ago, had been missing from home since Monday evening.

The note, written on stationery of the college, read:

"Let no one feel that he is the cause or anything he has done for my timely departure. God and I alone know the reason. I have been very happy. I have had every important wish fulfilled. Please, it is my departing wish that this be kept from the newspapers."

Clarence C. Ludlow, her father, said Elaine had been engaged in no love affair to his knowledge. She taught Sunday school class at the Knox Presbyterian church.

Defense Program Due to Bring Farm Gains

The "slickers" who thought they would get reserved seats to witness the Halloween parade by crowding at the big windows in front of the Y. M. C. A. building last night found themselves in the ranks of the "slickered" instead. Thinking that the parade would go past the "Y" as in former years, a crowd of 50 or more took their places at the window to wait for the parade. But when the parade reached Mulberry, it turned north —violating a custom of long year's standing. Instead of having an ideal place to watch the parade, the group had to take their places behind the crowd that had already lined the streets.

Yesterday first graders of Bushnell school learned something first hand about farming. They were taken to farms near Lexington and given a first hand picture of what goes on. Earlier in the week 100 pupils from that school visited the sorghum molasses camp near Epworth and saw the cane shredded and reduced to sugar water and later boiled into syrup. On the return trip, they stopped at the Mansfield Shale Products company to watch the work there. They were accompanied by Principal Roy Spetka and their teachers.

The political campaign even figured in the soaping of windows in the Mansfield business district last night by pranksters. Numerous arguments between boys and girls of high school age who take their politics seriously were settled by writing the names of President Roosevelt and Willkie on windows and then marking them out, or adding complimentary lines, or boos, depending upon the pranksters' feeling about the presidential contest. If the boys and girls missed any of the show windows downtown, it wasn't in evidence this morning.

OPPOSES THIRD TERM FOR FDR

Catholic Editor Declares 'We Can Stay Out of War' If Roosevelt Doesn't Win.

NEW YORK — "We can stay out of war if on Nov. 5 we vote Franklin D. Roosevelt out of office," declares Rev. James M. Gillis, editor of The Catholic World, in a principal editorial in the November issue of the magazine.

Citing the Canon Law of the Roman Catholic church as prescribing "possibility of a second but not a third term" for superior officers because of "the weakness of men and the propensity of those who once obtain power to hold it,'" Father Gillis bitterly attacked Mr. Roosevelt's "indispensability."

The editor, however, directed his chief attack against the President's foreign policy.

"What interests me and puzzles me is that the president should say and do a hundred things, which he is not called upon by his office to do, judging, condemning, challenging, threatening other nations, all but daring them to war, yet blandly declare before God and man, 'I work and pray for peace'," Father Gillis charges in the editorial.

"It is a psychological riddle. I confess I don't understand the man. But I do think him inconsistent and unpredictable. An inconsistent, unpredictable man is no man to be three times president of the United States.

"To perpetuate in office a man with a mania for power, who asks, obtains and holds all that he gets, and demands ever more and more would be as great a political blunder as that of Hindenburg and the Reichstag that handed over all the liberties of the people to Hitler," Father Gillis contended.

AAA CHIEF SEES BIGGER SALE OF DAIRY PRODUCTS

Looks For Steady Prices But Larger Volume of Buying As More Jobs Are Made.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — The Ohio farmer, like his industrial neighbor in the city, stands to gain directly through the national defense program.

Authority for this statement is Elmer F. Kruse, chairman of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in Ohio.

This state agricultural leader expects that the increased employment through the defense program will make it possible for more persons to buy things —including foods—which they have been doing without or have had in lesser quantity.

One commodity is milk, consequently Kruse sees a "satisfactory" outlook for the Ohio dairy farmer during the next 12 months.

For the Ohio farmer in general, 1941, according to Kruse, will be a year of steady prices. He foresees little chance of a price decline in agricultural products unless there is an abrupt end to the European war.

Kruse, who directs the Ohio AAA program from his Columbus office and spends week-ends on his farm near St. Mary's, said that the relief of unemployment is the only hope the farmer has of prosperity.

This farm-bred agricultural leader saw little hope for the farmer in foreign trade.

One bright spot in the otherwise gloomy foreign market picture, as noted by Kruse, is that when hostilities cease, this nation would be in a fortunate position for the resumption of trade. The erstwhile belligerents will need food—and we have plenty of it.

Late reports show that the European wheat production in the current season is expected to decline about 16 per cent from last year's harvest of almost 1,700,000,000 bushels. The United States surplus would more than meet their needs.

While on the subject of wheat, Kruse mentioned that he had good reports of winter wheat in Ohio.

SCHOOLS QUIET

Mansfield Buildings Closed; Teachers at Conference.

Public schools throughout the city were quiet today as all buildings closed down and teachers left the city to attend conferences of the Northeast Ohio Teachers association.

The teachers will attend meetings in Cleveland, Columbus, Marion and Toledo over the week-end.

Supt. W. L. Miller will be among the speakers who will address a meeting of managers and directors of school restaurants in Cleveland on "Correlation of Lunch Rooms with School Progress."

Miss Ruth Dunham, Senior high school teacher, will also speak to a group of teachers in Marion on "We Are Contemporaries of Epoch-Making Changes."

TAKE PART IN PEACE CONTEST

Four Pupils of Union School to Give Orations Sunday.

Four pupils of Union rural high school will take part in the local Prince of Peace Declamation contest at Franklin church, Weller township, Sunday at 8 p. m., J. E. McCollough, superintendent, announced today.

The pupils and their declamations are: Beatrice Boals, "Men Who Forget;" Miriam Pugh, "War —and Do You Want It?" Richard Gramly, "Christ for the Crisis;" and John Dickey, "Blind Followers."

Winner of the contest will compete for county honors at the county contest in December.

The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

You Can't Print That.

(This is a compendium of tales that can't be told with names, because they're too true to print. If you find in them any resemblance to actual characters, living or dead—you've probably guessed right!)

Here is a happy ending story. They happen all too seldom on Broadway—or anywhere, except in fairy tales and folk lore. A couple of years ago, Rose and Rob X.— one of the country's most famous couples—dissolved, and all their friends and all their millions of fans were saddened.

There was too much difference in their ages, the wise money said, and for a change the wise money was right. So Rob, who happened to be a great comedian, wore a face that could have modeled for Pagliacci, and Rosie picked out another fellow nearer her age and prepared to marry him.

But Rob couldn't let her go easily. He had to make one last try to get her—and her love—back. He found a show that a lot of other comics had turned down, and he put $100,000 into it because he thought there was a good part in it for him and for Rosie. He knew that for $100,000 he could hold her in his arms on the stage, anyway.

And he did, for a couple of weeks. Then Rosie quit the show, saying she wanted no part of his public lovemaking—and Rob was so brokenhearted he wanted to scrap the whole play, forget the $100,000, and vanish. But Rob is a trouper. He couldn't throw scores of people out of work just so he could run away and weep. He stayed with the play, and brought it into New York.

It's a hit. Not just a mild hit—a big, roaring, healthy, box-office hit. And Rob, who never thought it would happen, is a bigger star now than he ever was when he was lucky in love.

(But you can't print that. Because Rob will never be really happy without Rosie, and Broadway will never give him much sympathy, now. "With his money," they say, "he can afford to be miserable!"

* * *

Joan has been understudy to a famous girl star, and Joe stepped into the spotlight briefly when he took the place of an almost-as-famous boy star. Joan and Joe are in love. Their engagement has been announced in the Broadway columns, and they'll waltz down the aisle any day now.

Unless.

Unless four chorines who are friends of Joan's figure out some way of telling her that the man she loves has a police record longer than the list of charming lies he's told her. That he has been up for petty larceny, extortion, and criminal assault!

(But you can't print that. The girls haven't figured out a way of shattering her happiness, yet—and you wouldn't want to be the one, would you?)

Martin is a producer married to Marguerite, an actress, which is usually a fatal combination wherever you find it.

When they were in Hollywood, her name was linked with that of every available male from prop boy to casting director, but Martin never heard the whispers, and went right on adoring her while his friends tsk-tsked.

He sank several fortunes into films for her to play in, because she was ambitious and wanted to be a star. He surrounded her by lavish casts and hired the best directors in pictures to coach her. But she couldn't act.

She blames him for her failures, even though everyone knew how silly that was. If her acting had been half as good as his judgment she would have won an Academy award.

Finally, last year she came upon a script for a play. The part, she decided, was perfect for her. It was the role that would make her a star. Broadway was her next goal.

Martin tried to persuade her to forget it. Even though she coaxed and wheedled with all her charm, he stuck to his decision not to waste any more money on her vaporous talents.

So she resorted to tears. She staged long sessions of violent weeping—and Martin, who loves her so much he cannot bear to see her cry, bought her the play.

Her leading man was chosen strictly for his acting ability, and when the morning after opening night dawned, it turned out that he was the only thing in the whole play that the critics liked. So Marguerite wept her husband into firing him, and hiring in his place her favorite boy friend, Archie.

So Archie is co-star now, and when Marguerite and Archie are on the stage you can bet they are the worst pair of actors ever assembled for the price of one ticket. Even their on-stage love scenes aren't as convincing as the ones they play in the wings.

And the husband, Martin? Well, just to satisfy his wife, he's not only keeping the show open at a loss, but he's paying her sweetheart an unwarranted salary to help spoil the play!

(But you can't print that. Because if Martin knew the truth he'd fire Archie. And that would make Marguerite cry—and you know Martin's so in love with her he can't bear to see her cry!)

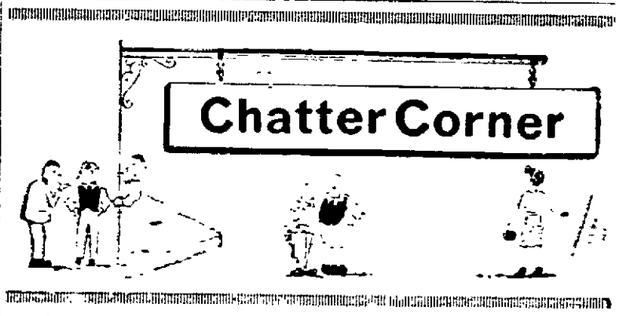
Hank is a comedian who beat around the burlesque circuits for ten years or so and got nowhere fast. The only one in the world who had faith in his talent was Larry, his booking agent, who did nip-ups (and spent plenty of money) trying to put the comedian across.

When radio began using comics, Larry fought to get Hank an audition, and finally did. Overnight, the comedian clicked and became a household word. Larry managed him completely, fought for him like a mother hen. Once Hank hit the big money, Larry hired a famous lawyer to protect Hank's interests.

And you guessed it. Hank learned that, since he and Larry never had a written contract (why should such good pals need a contract?) it was silly of him to pay him agent's fees. Larry took it to court—and the lawyer he had hired defended Hank.

The agent lost the case. And melodramatically enough, he soon died from a broken heart.

(But you can't print that. Comics are supposed to be the Broadway Pagliaccis, and agents are only ten-percenters. They're not supposed to have hearts to break!)



(Just jottings about people you know, as they're seen here and there about town.)

Ohio State-Indiana Game Tops Ohio Grid Slate

Bucks Battle To Win

Hope To End Losing Streak Saturday; 47,000 To Witness Game.

COLUMBUS — (AP) —Ohio State battles Indiana Saturday afternoon before 47,000 fans in a not-too-important Western conference grid tilt, each being out of the championship running.

The contest headlines a 23-game program involving Buckeye college squads, but it doesn't monopolize the spotlight's glare. Holding heavy interest is the Oberlin-Wittenberg contest at Springfield, in which either the Yeomen or the Lutherans (or both) must drop from the unbeaten-untied list.

* * *

Wittenberg will be bidding for its fourth straight Ohio conference win, while Oberlin is making its first start against an Ohio foe after four conquests over out-of-state opponents.

Other top-notch games include Kent State at Bowling Green, and John Carroll at Toledo in the Ohio loop, and non-league engagements between Carnegie Tech and Cincinnati, Lincoln at Wilberforce, Ohio Wesleyan at Xavier, and Boston university at Western Reserve.

At Weston, W. Va., last night, little Rio Grande college continued scoreless for the season in dropping its fifth straight game to Salem college, 38 to 0.

Owens Wants Louis Debate

World's Champion Runner Seeks Session With Boxer.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Jesse Owens, negro track star and ardent supporter of President Roosevelt for a third term, today had challenged heavyweight champion Joe Louis, a Wendell Willkie campaigner to debate issues of the presidential campaign

In a telegram to Democratic national headquarters, Owens, back at Ohio State university to complete his college education, said:

"Have telegraphed challenge to Joe Louis to debate the issues of this campaign any time, any place —particularly the issues involving my race and the United States of America."

Louis, at his press conference in New York, declines to say whether he would accept.

Reporters expressed the belief that it would be a great debate "The world's fastest human and the world's fastest puncher."

Sandusky Player Races for Touchdown

Charles Wilson, Sandusky Junior high backfield ace, is shown above as he tucked the pigskin under his arm and streaked some 50 yards for a touchdown against the John Simpson seventh and eighth grade players in a contest played at Stadium field yesterday. Sandusky, which held a weight advantage defeated the Simpson team, 19 to 6. It was the Simpson club's first game of the season.

SHILOH — Paced by Charles Harrington, halfback, who alone scored five touchdowns, the Shiloh high school six-man football team chalked up its fifth victory of the season here yesterday afternoon when it trounced Plymouth high 54 to 14.

The entire Shiloh backfield ran wild all afternoon in scoring the eight touchdowns. Three of those registered by Harrington were the result of passes. In the fourth period Delmar Nesbitt ran 60 yards for another tally.

Cunningham, Plymouth fullback, was outstanding for the visitors as they scored two touchdowns and a safety in the second and third period. Shiloh chalked up 15 first downs and Plymouth seven

Shiloh closes its 1940 season Nov. 9 when it engages Huron, the only aggregation to defeat Shiloh this year. The game is scheduled for 2 p. m

SANDUSKY JUNIOR HIGH DOWNS SIMPSON 19 TO 6

Tygers Invade Ashland As Rams Trek to Bellville In Tilts Saturday.

By CHARLES MARTIN
(News-Journal Sports Editor.)

MANSFIELD high school football fans will have to travel Saturday if they want to see either Mansfield or Madison high in action.

The Tygers invade Ashland to tackle Ashland high in a game that will end gridiron relations between the two schools. The rivalry, which is one of the oldest in scholastic circles, started in 1900.

Madison high's Rams, seeking to register their initial win in eight starts, go against the Bellville Bluejays in an annual tussle at Bellville at 2:30 p. m. Saturday.

* * *

It will mark the 27th meeting between Ashland and Mansfield and the Tygers are favored to annex this game. Mansfield lost its last tilt to Ashland in 1934 when the Ashlanders scored a 7 to 6 win.

CITY LEAGUE MEETS.

The City Class A basketball league will hold its initial organization meeting for the 1940-41 season at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Y. M. C. A. Any sponsor or team manager planning to enter a club should be present at the meeting.

Coach Al Fendrick's Rams will be the underdogs against the fast Bellville combine In the last two years. Bellville has entered the game as a favorite only to see Madison emerge with the victory and the club is out to halt the Rams.

Mentor Paul Snyder has his charges in top shape for the Ashland affray and believes the club will win if it isn't over-confident. Mansfield was on edge for the Massillon tilt last week and Snyder fears the players may have let down

The Ashland melee will mark the first time this season that the Tygers have played a scheduled contest in daylight. All the previous games this season were played under the floodlights. Mansfield will also tangle with Shelby in an afternoon game Nov. 16 at Shelby.

Only one regular will be missing from the lineup when the Tygers take the field. He is Dick Murray, right tackle, who suffered a knee injury in the Massillon tilt.

Madison always points for the Bellville affray and fans can expect the Rams to turn in their best performance of the season. The Rams' biggest job will be to stop the hard-charging Dick Keiser, veteran fullback.

The Bluejays also have a dangerous passing attack with Don Palm, quarterback doing the tossing Bellville suffered its worst defeat last week and will be fighting to climb back in the win column.

Automotive Supplies Await Invasion of Columbus Team

COACH EARL McMULLEN'S Automotive Supply semi-pro grid machine was tapering off today as it awaited the invasion of the Columbus Avondale Athletic club gridders at 2:30 p. m. at the Fairground Sunday.

The Mansfielders will be after their second triumph of the season against the Capitol City combine. The Supplies registered their initial win against the Sandusky Maroons last week.

McMullen liked the way the Mansfield team clicked off two touchdowns in the first eight minutes of the game at Sandusky and has spent most of the week putting the finishing touches on the running attack.

The Avondale team comes here with one of the best aggregations. It has a great running attack and can take to the air without trouble.

Tennessee-Boston College Favored for Sugar Bowl Tilt

ATLANTA—(AP)—You can print on your hatband the names of Tennessee and Boston college as probable New Year's day opponents in New Orleans' Sugar Bowl football classic.

With the bids only a month away, there are few teams of bowl caliber ready, willing and able to fill the exacting bill. Fewer still are available in the south, and both the Sugar Bowl and Orange Bowl like a southern flavor on one side of the field when the teams line up.

Sugar Bowl officials are traditionally reluctant to speculate on probable choices. But sports writer Fred Digby, of the New Orleans Item long has been associated with the Sugar Bowl group, and is regarded as something of an unofficial spokesman through his column. And his word is Tennessee vs. Boston college.

Digby contends that Texas A. & M., last year's Sugar Bowl winner, is Rose Bowl-bound, and rates the Aggies definitely out of the Sugar Bowl speculation.

* * *

The Orange Bowl committee already has disposed of all seats between the 30-yard lines, and the Sugar Bowl is nearly as far along.

Boxers Clash In Title Bout

Overlin, Ex-Sailor Defends Crown Against Belloise.

NEW YORK —(AP)— It took Ken Overlin, an ex-sailor from Virginia, 13 years of battling all over the world to ascend to the middleweight throne recognized by New York and he hasn't any intention of exiting in his first title defense.

Nobody thinks he will be in any great danger, therefore, when he bumps into 21-year-old Steve Belloise of New York in a 15-round championship bout at Madison Square Garden tonight.

* * *

Belloise, nine years younger than his foe, was just a semi-final boxer last May on the card that brought Overlin his "middleweight" title, recognized in New York and California, with a victory over Ceferino Garcia.

* * *

He knocked out Victor Dellicurti in one round that night and last September he earned the right to face Overlin by outpointing Garcia, himself.

* * *

But Belloise, in spite of his youth and power, still is an inexperienced ringmaster with only 33 fights to show against the clever champion's 181.

Barker Likes Minnesota In Leading Conference Tilt Saturday.

By HERB BARKER

NEW YORK — (AP) — Another chapter in the weekly football guessing contest:

Northwestern - Minnesota: As close to a standoff as can be imagined. Both unbeaten, both untied, both potent. Minnesota, fast and alert, seems to have waded through the tougher competition. Minnesota.

* * *

Army-Notre Dame: Notre Dame. Texas A. and M.-Arkansas: Spot for an upset but stringing along with the Aggies. U. C. L. A.-Stanford: U. C. L. A. has lost five ball games. Stanford.

Tulane-Clemson: Timidly, Clemson. Duke-Georgia Tech: Possibly fireworks but taking Duke.

Cornell-Columbia: No possible selection but Cornell. Fordham-North Carolina: No surprise either way. Fordham Penn-Navy: This corner's nod goes to Navy.

Ohio State-Indiana: These two have really been through the mill. The Buckeyes have the greater man-power and that might prove decisive. Ohio State.

Tennessee - Louisiana State: Can't look beyond Tennessee. Kentucky-Alabama: Taking Alabama, but not too happily. Georgia-Auburn: The loss of Rufus Deal will hurt Auburn and Georgia seems to be making excellent progress. Still, Auburn.

Vanderbilt - Mississippi: Mississippi. Texas-Southern Methodist: S. M. U. Texas Christian-Baylor: Baylor. California-Oregon State: Oregon State.

Boston college-Manhattan: Add up to Boston college. Duquesne-Marquette: Duquesne. Harvard-Princeton: Princeton. Holy Cross-Colgate: Colgate

Penn State-South Carolina. Penn State is the choice. Syracuse-Georgetown: Definitely a risk for the Hoyas' long undefeated string but the selection still must be Georgetown.

Yale-Brown: Brown. Iowa-Purdue: Purdue. Wisconsin-Illinois: Wisconsin. Michigan State-Kansas State: Michigan State. Oklahoma-Nebraska: Might be close but Nebraska gets this vote.

Missouri-New York university: Looks safe for Missouri. Villanova-Kansas: Villanova. Detroit-Tulsa: A threat to the Titans' unbeaten record but we'll still take Detroit.

West Virginia-Washington and Lee: Quick, Watson, the coin. West Virginia. North Carolina State-Furman: State.

* * *

Also: Temple over Bucknell: Dartmouth over Sewanee: William & Mary over Virginia Military, Virginia over Virginia Tech; Oregon over Montana; Washington State over Idaho; Colorado over Utah; Brigham Young over Utah State: Lafayette over Washington & Jefferson; Santa Clara over San Francisco.

Carbetta and Smallwood Fight To Top Card.

An amateur fight card headlined by a bout between Paul Carbetta, rugged Mansfield flyweight, and Buddy Smallwood, of Akron, 1940 Cleveland Golden Gloves tournament champion, will be staged at the Friendly House late this month, Russ Gimbel, Settlement director, stated today. It will be a five-round tussle. Carbetta lost close decisions to Smallwood in two previous meetings. The latest defeat coming at Akron Tuesday night. WELLINGTON BOWS BEFORE NEW LONDON CATS, 14-2

WELLINGTON—The New London high school Wildcats snapped a three game losing streak here yesterday afternoon to defeat their "ancient" rivals, the Dukes of Wellington high, 14 to 2.

Evans, halfback, scored New London's two touchdowns in the second and third quarters, with Iceman placekicking the extra points both times. Wellington scored a safety in the first quarter for its lone two points.

NEW YORK—(INS)—President Larry MacPhail of the Brooklyn Dodgers today again denied reports that he was personally negotiating for the purchase of the Boston Bees.

However, he did admit having some recent conversations "about Boston," but these confabs, MacPhail insisted, were "in Bob Quinn's interest and with his knowledge and approval." Quinn is president of the Bees.

Grid Briefs

NEW YORK—(INS)—A squad of 30 Columbia football players were en route to Ithaca, N. Y., for their annual game on Saturday with unbeaten and untied Cornell.

HAMILTON, N. Y. — (INS)— Colgate's football squad headed for Massachusetts today where it will meet Holy Cross in Worcester tomorrow. The team will stop at Amherst for a brief workout before proceeding to Worcester. Coach Andy Kerr reported his squad of 35 in good shape.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — (INS) — Everybody on the Harvard football team, excepting Coach Dick Harlow, was in excellent condition today and rarin' to take Princeton in the annual game tomorrow. Harlow directed activities from a wheel-chair, which he uses since chipping a bone in his right knee a few days ago while practicing too strenuously with his boys.

WEST POINT, N. Y.—(INS)—The Cadets went through a brief workout today before departing for New York and their traditional game with Notre Dame.

Despite the overwhelming odds against them, the Cadets were confident of giving the great Irish eleven a real battle.

PHILADELPHIA —(INS)— Sophomore Jack Welsh and Johnny Dutcher were named as wingback and end, respectively, on Penn's starting eleven against Navy on Saturday. Coach George Munger also groomed Mort Shiekman, another sophomore, to replace Irv Mendelson, who is still favoring an ankle injury, at guard.

MINNEAPOLIS—(INS)—Cheered on by enthusiastic well-wishers, Minnesota's unbeaten football team was to leave today on the first leg of its journey to Evanston, Ill., where tomorrow the Gophers will engage Northwestern in the outstanding midwestern game of the day. Thirty-six players were listed for the trip.

EVANSTON, Ill. — (INS) — Northwestern's high-flying Wildcats were reported at near full strength today for their important Big Ten grid encounter with Minnesota tomorrow. Only doubt as to the status of Bill DeCorrevont, the team's No. 1 halfback who is nursing a sore ankle, bothered Wildcat backers.

A PEOPLE KEPT IN IGNORANCE IS A NATION Enslaved..

In America the People Have

1. FREEDOM OF SPEECH
2. FREEDOM OF WORSHIP
3. FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY
4. FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

"And These Shall Never Pass Away"

The world has learned many lessons since a Hitler strode across the stage destroying, corrupting, hating. It has looked at this horror and seen one inalterable fact—that the disease of fascism first strikes at the Press!

Once the Press loses its voice, the people are blinded to the truth, gagged, silenced. Once the Press is dictated to, the people are put in chains—and fascism plants its barbarism upon a nation.

Wherever dictatorship has come intor power, the first shadow of its coming has been cast upon the pages of the Press . . . If in America, the Press is ever denied its right to differ, argue, opinionate; if it be deprived of its inalienable heritage to cry out against injustice, to challenge corruption—then the Bill of Rights would be dead, the Declaration of Independence a memory, the Constitution a myth—and America a land of goose-steps!

Consider the Press abroad—silenced, inert, decadent; told what to write, when to write, how to write! Consider the people abroad—crushed, blinded, gagged; told what to do, when to do it, how to do it!

Fascism annihilates the liberties of all by first crushing the Press. With a free Press dead, the people are easier victims . . . this is the picture under Fascism!

IN AMERICA THE PRESS IS FREE—PRODUCT AND GUARDIAN OF DEMOCRACY--

LET'S KEEP IT FREE!

Let us face facts . . . Today, free men and free institutions are fighting for their very lives. Leading this fight for freedom in America is the Press! The very heart of liberty, the very core of our heritage is in the Press. That truth can no longer be mumbled or mouthed in truisms. It must now become a salient, fighting message for the American people. During the years that this nation has forged ahead as the outstanding champion of civilization as we know it, the Press has clarioned the voice of the people. Never once has it faltered, never once has it laid down its cudgels in behalf of truth and justice. While there is darkness in the world, the Press will struggle to bring light. It is your weapon against chaos.

ESTIMATES ON 8 SEWER LINES BEFORE COUNCIL

$26,500 Program Outlined By Engineer To Help Prevent Basement Floods.

City council had before it today estimates on the cost of construction of eight storm sewer lines designed to relieve at least a portion of the city's "water-in-the-basement" trouble.

The estimates were prepared by City Engineer W. C. Statler and sent to council yesterday. Total cost of the projected work is figured at $26,500 on a contract basis.

Councilmen, however, have decided to have the sewers installed by WPA if proposals can be drafted and approved in time to get work started this winter.

Council's finance committee has for some time considered appropriating $20,000 from the sanitary sewer fund surplus to finance such a project.

Largest of the sewers would be constructed on North Mulberry street from West Fourth street to Touby's run at the cost of $7,800 to eliminate flooding of the streets.

Two $5,000 lines would include 24 to 36-inch sewers on Vennum avenue and Poplar street and Central avenue to relieve flooded conditions in those areas during rainy periods.

To relieve the present overloaded sewer on West Sixth street, a 27-inch line would be laid on Sycamore street at the cost of $5,300, and a 30-inch sewer would be laid north of Cline avenue at the cost of $1,200 to allow for improvement of Johnny Appleseed school grounds.

Additional sewers would be laid on Chilton avenue, South Diamond street and an alley running off of Newman street at the cost of $2,200.

PROJECT OKED

$24,000 WPA Road Job Given Approval For Cass Township.

A $24,000 WPA road project for Cass township in Richland county had been approved today by WPA officials, County Engineer Howard Sword said.

The project calls for improvement of slightly more than four miles of the Plymouth-Springmill road to connect two hard-surfaced sections of the highway.

The federal government will provide $15,402 for the project, while the county will supply $8,598 in materials and equipment.

Work on the job is scheduled to get under way this fall, with about 40 men getting jobs for approximately two months if the weather is good.

Non-Partisan Ballot

CHARLES C. PAYNE for COUNTY TREASURER

HAROLD LUTZ for Prosecuting Attorney

Let's Look at the County Record Which These Candidates Propose to Continue

HOWARD WENNING for CLERK OF COURTS

1. TAX COLLECTION PROGRAM

The Commissioners, Treasurer, Prosecutor, Recorder, Engineer, Auditor, Clerk of Courts and Sheriff formed a committee of the whole to plan a tax collection program with this unusual achievement.

At an expenditure of about $2,000 per year a special Assistant Prosecutor was appointed who wrote some 10,000 letters, interviewed several thousand tax payers and finally disposed of more than 1,100 parcels of land by tax sale. In all cases the delinquent taxpayer was given every possible consideration and in no case was a property owner deprived of his home.

The delinquency was reduced by more than $340,000 and more than a quarter of a million dollars was made available to schools, municipalities and townships in this county.

We think the expenditure of $8,000 to a Special Assistant Prosecutor to collect more than $300,000 is good business.

2. BONDED DEBT PAID OFF

Ten years ago Richland County owed approximately $1,250,000. On October 1, 1940, the last of these bonds was paid and your county is now free from debt. Believing that no bonds should be issued without a vote of the people the present Board of Commissioners has issued no new bonds despite numerous demands for additional funds.

3. ROAD AND BRIDGE PROGRAM

During the past seven years 551 miles of secondary roads were constructed or reconstructed, and 187 new bridges were completed, together with nine miles of guard rail.

4. LOW COUNTY TAX RATE

Richland County has a rate of $2.50, one of the lowest in Ohio. All of this levy is available for operating expenses and not one penny is needed to pay off bonds.

5. OHIO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE REPORT

An independent survey conducted in 1940 by the Ohio Chamber of Commerce gives Richland County an excellent rating in the conduct of its business.

BEE BEE'S GOD SEND SAYS SIDNEY RESIDENT

For Weakened Kidneys and Bladder Trouble BEE BEE'S Is a Proven Medicine That Will Give Quick Relief

J. B. Fahnstock of 614 North Miami street, Sidney, Ohio, says: "I have been bothered for five years with prostate trouble, my kidneys were in such a condition that I would have to rise four or five times nightly. Bladder weakness and this kidney condition caused me much misery with pains across my back. The broken sleep at night and those awful pains caused me to lose weight and to become very rundown, my food would not digest properly and I had no appetite at all. I have taken two bottles of BEE BEE'S and feel greatly improved. I do not have to get up nights now at all. I am getting more restful sleep than I have had in many months. This wonderful rest at night has given me a new lease on life. The poisons from my kidneys and bladder are being eliminated properly, therefore, not upsetting my stomach and causing constipation. For the relief of prostate trouble, kidney weakness, and bladder irritation I highly recommend BEE BEE'S and suggest that every one suffering with this condition try this new and remarkable remedy at once."

BEE BEE'S is a liquid herb medicine made especially for those who suffer with prostate, kidney weakness, bladder, irritation, pains across the back, and night rising. The benefit BEE BEE'S is giving thousands, should convince you that it would be a mistake not to try this remarkable new medicine and get the same blessed relief in such a short time as have others.
